John O. Booth, nominated for state treasurer on the union ticket, is a man that any community might well be proud of. It may be said of Mr. Booth, "John," as his friends love to call him, that the elements are so blended in him that all nature might say this is a man. Honest as the day is long, public-spirited, slow to judge others, fearless in the defense of the right, and with a heart as big as an ox, J. O. Booth deservedly numbers his personal friends and admirers by the thousands. His nomination comes to him unsolicited. It is true that he was not favorable to the great honor of being made the trustee of the people's funds, but the choice of the convention flowed to him without organization on his part and in recognition of his moral worth. J. O. Booth should get and will get, in southern Oregon the largest majority given to any man on the union ticket.—Mining Journal.

The nomination of Hon. Wm. M Ramsey os McMinnville for supreme judge has been well received, without regard to party affiliations. His worth as a citizen and lawyer is known in all parts of the state, and he has received a large number of congratulatory telegrams and letters from leading lawyers, some of them being prominent in the republican party. What is needed is nonpartisanship in the supreme court, if it is to be a court of the people.—Telephone Register.

Tongue was renominated for congress in the first district but Ellis was turned down in the second district, and Malcolm Moody nominated in his stead. Young Moody is a fine representative man, favored by Portland republican influences, and will receive the support of the Simon-Corbett forces. There are reasons for believing that he will not prove so strong as Ellis would have done in the district, and it is quite likely that C. M. Donaldson the nominee for congress on the "union forces", will be the next congressman from the second district. Mr. Donaldson has this advantage in ability, is better posted on political issues and would better represent the interests of all the people of the district. That Mr. Moody is a better man for the powers interests of Portland, goes without saying, and he will receive strong support in that city. Portland has, ever since the second congressional district was created, endeavored to secure a candidate less bucolic than Mr. Ellis and therefore more manipulative, with the result that she has now partly succeeded in the nomination of Malcolm Moody. Portland wanted Wallace McCammant, a greasy, servile, hypocritical pretender to virtue, as a candidate for congress, and not being able to secure him, she accepted her second choice in Malcolm Moody, who is too much more preferable and far, far, far,
