Harney County Horses.

William Corbel recently an employe of the French-Glenn Cattle Company in Oregon, and who has been placed in charge of stock shipped to Texas, California, Ill. and Nebraska, this morning gave out the following:

"The present outlook for range horses is the best that has been known for years. Horses that a few years back would hardly have been corralled are now being gathered for market. The ranges of southern Oregon are now in better condition than I have seen them for years past. Grasses look healthy; water is plentiful, and, taking it in all, the general outlook for the stockmen was never better.

"I am here to meet a Mr. Lowry of San Francisco, and we will leave on his arrival for the southern Oregon country. Mr. Lowery is a well known stableman and owner of stock yards at San Francisco. He comes here with the intention of shipping horses to his stock yards at the bay city. If suitable arrangements can be made, I will gather horse and ship them to his yards at least once a month, and probably as often as once every two weeks. Good horses will bring good prices, but there are thousands of range horses that would not justify a person in gathering them for shipment. This kind of animals or ponies are always more numerous than the 1,000 to 1,200-pound classes. I expect, however, to make horse shipping my business for the rest of this year, and will gather all the horses I can handle.

"Dave Shirk, a rancher of Catlow Valley will have many good horses, and will, no doubt, make many shipments, having to pass his possessions and being more or less on his stock ranges I am in a position to know. His stock is in good condition, and it is known that every fall and winter horses from his ranges are transported to market."

Asked as to the condition of the hay crop and should there come a hard winter what would be the circumstances in which the ranchers would be placed as regards to feed, Mr. Corbel said: "The hay crop is the largest that has been for years, and no fears are entertained even should a hard winter come, for the supply is ample to feed the stock through the severe weather."
