JULIAN BYRD - - - - - Manager

The Times-Herald has devoted considerable space the past few weeks to bulletins sent out by the Agricultural College on garden pests and suggestions as to best methods of eradicating such. It is hoped these articles will prove beneficial to home farmers and gardners and good may result from reading them. We are fortunate in having but few pests yet there are enough to make it very annoying to the beginner who doesn't know how to get rid of them.

The editoral clipped from the Portland Journal regarding the shipment of Harney county cattle should cause local stockmen to investigate the cause. There is evidently something wrong when we can do better by shipping our grass fed steers when the Portland markets are so near. Is it because the feeders of the Missouri valley section can afford better prices with plenty of forage at their command to put the beef in prime condition? Would it pay these rancher along transportation lines in this state to take up such an industry? One thing is certain: When we have transportation in Harney Valley local men can put the finished products on the market at a vast greater profit than the present method. Then it will not be necessary to trail out 5000 head and take chances on what they will sell for on reaching the railroad.

The Times-Herald calls attention to the annual school election which comes soon. Remember the location of the new school building will be put before the voters to decide at this election.

Joe Bucahanan and little son are in the city from the station.

John Oard and his son James were up from their home near Lawen yesterday, making the trip in their auto.

The Canyon Eagle reports that Will French with his load of drummer friends and Ludwig Johnson went off the grade up Canyon Creek the other night when enroute out in an auto. The car went down the embankment some twenty feet and they were in a bad predicament but fornately a lady came along with a team and pulled it back on the grade.

Bishop R. L. Paddock of the Eastern Oregon Episcopal diocese, has been in the city since Wednesday. He held services at the Presbyterian church two evenings and will again fill the pulpit in that church tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock and at 8 o'clock in the evening. The Bishop is a very forceful and entertaining speaker and The Times-Herald would urge the people of Burns to attend the services tomorrow.

Raising Draft Horses in Oregon.

Dr. James Withycombe of the Oregon Agriculture College has the following in a recent issue of the Breeder's Gazette:

F. C. A. Inavale, Neb., makes inquiry in these words:

"What opportunities do Washington and Oregon offer a young man in the way of raising a high grade of draft horses?"

There are excellent opportunities for the profitable raising of good draft horses in Oregon. While this state has altogether 295,000 horses the supply of first class draft horses does not meet the demand. Perhaps the most economical and satisfactory way of producing these horses is upon the farm. Geographically Oregon is divided by the Cascade Range of mountains into two grand physical divisions, eastern and western Oregon. Western Oregon is humid and mixed farming is practiced. It is here that the large draft horses are produced. The mares are usually worked upon these farms to the time of foaling. Thus a pair of mares will raise colts and do the work upon a small farm. At two years old these draft colts will do light work, and at three years old they will perform the ordinary work of the farm. They are generally sold at four years old.

Eastern Oregon is mostly a semi-arid section and range husbandry is extensively practiced. This however is the great wheat-producing section of the state and it is upon these wheat farms where a very high class of draft horses is usually found. They do not generally attain the size met with in western Oregon, but are a very desirable type of horse, possessing great constitutional vigor, good feet and legs and are peculiarly free of any constitutional defect or unsoundness in any form. They are an active serviceable class of horses. The mares are worked and the colts are usually put to work when about three years old and are sold when four and five years of age. A great many horses are required upon these wheat farms for a comparatively short season in the spring and fall. Thus it is especially desired that horse-breeding be associated with wheat-farming in that section. To maintain a large number of geldings for such seasons of work would be an expensive proposition Good brood mares will not only do the bulk of the work of the farm but be a source of revenue from colts produced as well. It is also important that stock of some class be maintained upon these farms so as to conserve soil fertility.

Another system is raised draft horses in range districts within fenced pastures. The mares are not worked under this system, neither do they or their colts receive any grain. The result is that they are not so well developed as those raised under farm conditions and where they receive some grain. They are not so desirable as those raised under more domestic conditions being usually harder to break and often do not do well for the first year when put to work in the city or upon the farm. They are usually sold when five or six years old.

WILL SAVE STATE MORE MONEY.

Prediction is made by Prof. E. L. Potter of the animal husbandry department of the Oregon Agricultural College, who is also secretary of the new state stallion license board, that the operation of the new stallion law will save the horsemen of the state many thousands of dollars.

"If we had had the law before it would have saved some $10,000 or $15,000 to the horsemen of the state on the price of animals sold them as pure bred under bogus certificates," said Prof. Potter discussing the results to be expected. "It is probable that $1,000 more was paid apiece for the dozen stallions with unsatisfactory pedigrees for whom we have received requests for licenses, than if a true statement of their breeding had been given at time of sale.

"We have thus far had applications from about 400 stallion owners, which is probably not much over half the number of stallions owned at present in Oregon. The greater number have come from Wallowa county, though many have come in from Marion, Douglas, Baker and other parts of the state. We take these applications as an evidence of good faith on the part of the breeders, and they will not, of course, be prevented from using their stallions between the filing of the application and the issuance of the licence. The heavy correspondence regarding applications, and the work of classifying and filing them, occupies us at present, but when that is done we will begin issuing the licenses.

"Besides correcting the present practice of some horsemen of selling and using stallions having bogus pedigrees, the new law will do much to raise the standard of soundness, and thus improve the stock of the future. The future saving to horsemen of Oregon on these two points will be more than the entire cost of inspection and registration, to say nothing of the prevention of the use of stallions as "sound" which have diseases or constitutional weaknesses liable to affect the offspring."

WHY IS THIS THUSLY?

Things are not yet in going order when Mr. "Bill" Hanley's 5000 steers are driven about three times as far to Winnemucca, Nev., to take the train for Chicago, as against a third of the distance to one or other central Oregon depot for shipment to the Portland stockyards. And Mr. Hanley says, in Colorado the same Oregon cattle met several trainloads of eastern cattle enroute for Portland.

It is not only the distance by road to the shipping point that tells, but even more the hours spent in the cattle cars. It is understood that 24 hours would deliver the cattle in Portland from central Oregon as against four or five times as long for the 2000 mile journey to the Chicago yards. Every stockman tells of the srinkage in the cars.

No stockman in Oregon knows his business better than Mr. Hanley, and there is no better friend to the development of eastern and central Oregon. Therefore strong inducements must have taken his 5000 head east instead of west.—Portland Journal.

SOME FINE FURNITURE.

A representative of The Times-Herald visited the G. W. Clevenger furinture store yesterday and was surprised to see such a magnificent display of some of the finest furniture ever made. Mr. Clevenger has the building full and more coming.

Among the real handsome pieces of furniture are some of Sarcasion Walnut that certainly takes the fancy of any who see them. The wood is lighter in color than mahogany and takes a dull finish polish that is as fine as marble. Other handsome pieces in oak, walnut and mahogany were also on display besides some very handsome brass bedsteads, ect.

One piece of furniture which is certainly up to the minute in convenience is a cradle that has a clocklike mechanism which rocks it for an indefinite time—possibly all day—for it has a spring several hundred feet long, more or less, that when wound up might run for eight days. There is also an attachment with which a fan may be put into use for the same length of time. This affair should be in the house of every young mother who has something more to do than to amuse the baby.

J. J. Hienz is up from Lawen.

The uniform success that has attended the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has made it a favorite everywhere. It can always be depended upon. For sale by all good dealers.

There is one medicine that every family should be provided with and especially during the summer months; viz, Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed. It costs but a quarter. Can you afford to be without it? For sale by all good dealers.
