What Was It.

Last Monday night one of the lower sashes of a back window in the Episcopal church was smashed into a thousand pieces or more. The thing that did the smashing crawled into the church and took the beautiful cross which had been presented the church by Judge Brower in memory of his wife, and bent it double. There was no other damage that the writer was able to observe.

The English language fails us when we attempt a pen picture of the thing or the fiend that would commit a crime so low as to enter the house of God and desecrate the pew or the emblems of the sanctuary. He would be called a man because he wears the form, but otherwise he is inferior to the lowest of creation.
