Report Reveals 11 Deaths Per 100 Miles Of Travel

Oregon's traffic death rate for the first four months of 1946 was 11 persons killed per one hundred million miles of travel, exactly the same for the same period of 1945, Secretary of State Robert S. Farrell Jr., said today.

"Thus, while actual deaths are considerably higher than they were a year ago the death rate, which shows the number of deaths in relation to the exposure to accident, has not increased," the Secretary of State said.

Motor vehicle use during the first four months of 1946 soared to new highs for this state, Farrell said. The month of April, fo rexample, saw the highest gasoline consumption of any one month in the state's history, he declared.

"While Oregon's death rate is not increasing, we are barely holding our own and unless drivers and pedestrians exercise greater care, the death rate may start moving upward, as motor vehicle use continues to climb," Farrell said.

Oregon Too-- Hath Charms

Mr. Blue first saw and decided to some day live in the Tualatin Valley when the aircraft carrier Essex discharged him in Seattle last September. Mr. Blue was a chief radioman aboard that ship and saw a lot of action throughout the entire war.

Mr. Blue is an expert radio repairman and is hoping to locate in the vicinity.

HINTS--- For Food Savers

1. Try eggs baked in potato nests to replace the poached egg on toast at breakfast.
2. Let potato salad take the place of the second sandwich in the lunch box.
3. In biscuits, muffins, pancakes, cookies use oatmeal to replace part of the flour.
4. Use leftover cooked oatmeal as a binder in meat loaf and for thickening gravies, soups and stews.
5. For a delicious stuffing for the Sunday chicken try leftover cornbread.
6. For a breakfast treat, or the children's supper, toast stale bread and serve with hot milk.
7. For the luncheon salad use cooked salad dressing. For variety add some chili sauce or pickle relish.
8. To get the last drop of fat, warm the frying pan before pouring into can.
10. When cooking with fat use low heat. If you let it smoke it soon turns rancid and cannot be used again for food.
10. Try hominy grits in place of rice with chicken or cheese, or as a desert with syrup.

Save!

Save every left-over after meals for later use and, by reducing your purchases, have a personal share in building up stocks of wheat products, fats and other foods to be used in feeding millions of youngsters, old folks and the infirm in starvation areas overseas.

Don't Overheat Fat

Watch the fat on the fire—keep the flame low, says the American Red Cross Nutrition Service. Fat heated to the smoking point loses its flavor and soon turns rancid.
