A FEW FARM NOTES

A country so well adapted to dairying as Oregon should never buy from out side states one pound of butter or cheese.

Hogs selling at 5c a pound and wheat at 45 to 50c a bushel in the interior does not show much thought on the part of the farmer who does this kind of business.

The Albany creamery that has been in operation about four years, put into the farmers pockets about $15,000 annually. The creamery is run on the co-operative plan, and the farmers wife is not bothered with making butter or hunting a market for it.

It matters not whether we are a believer in special purpose cow or a dual purpose cow, we should do a little more milking and churning in Oregon. Time and study along intelligent lines will determine which is the most profitable cow to keep and this will settle the whole argument.

Mr. J. B. Stump, of Monmouth, Oregon, has a number of pigs of various ages which for a period of several weeks this summer had nothing to eat but rape. They grew rapidly on their rape diet and at the end of the term were in good condition as the average of the hogs butchered in Portland.

If a neighbor has a flock of sheep which drops many twins, it will be good policy to obtain some of the ewe lambs and thus possess the kind of stock without much expense and at the same time test the practicability of breeding for twins under your own management. Such a course will certainly produce more prolific breeders.

The visit made to Tillamook county by several members of the faculty of the Oregon Agricultural College should convince farmers that any old place will not do for a cow barn. The drift of their whole arguments in the care of cows and the handling of milk turned to cleanliness, ventilation and proper sanitary arrangements where cows and milk are kept.—Headlight.

Dr. Hawk while going to visit a patient in Jefferson stepped on a round rock and dislocated his ankle. Hobbling into a house he set the member got in his buggy and started home. Just after he crossed the wagon bridge his team ran away, again dislocating the ankle and breaking the third and fourth fingers of his left hand.

Good Enough to Take.

The finest quality of loaf sugar is used in the manufacture of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the roots used in its preparation give it a flavor similar to that of maple syrup, making it very pleasant to take. As a medicine for the cure of coughs colds, la grippe, croupand whooping cough it is unequaled by any other. It always cures, and cures quickly. For sale by Peery and Peery.

Hamlin, at Medford on the night of August 14, 1899, pleaded guilty last night and was sentenced to nine year's imprisonment in the penitentiary. The trouble between the brother and sister grew out of the settlement of the estate of their father the late James Hamlin. Upon Mrs Carlile's plea of guilty her husband was released from custody.

To be a successful farmer nowadays calls for as much thought and brain as to be a successful merchant or doctor. To gain the best result out of a farm today calls for more training and education than in years gone by. This is because the markets are widening and competition is becoming keener. The idea that farming is simply manual pursuit is wrong. The farmer of today must be a man of brain as well as muscle, or else he cannot succeed. National conditions, national tendencies, all have their bearing upon the farmer and stockman, because they are the producers of what keeps the world alive. Haphazard farming never did pay. It has given some farmers a living in the past, but it will give fewer of them any living at all in the future. A young man going into farming must now have something more than money to buy land, implements and stock. He must have training and knowledge. The time is at hand when farming is seriously being considered as a profession requiring the same mental capacity as medicine, law or literature.—Rual Spirit.

OREGON INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITION

Will be Held at Portland September 23 to October 28.

The great Exposition building in Portland, which is one of the largest on the coast, is undergoing wonderful transformation now and will be a dazzling scene of splendor during this year's fair, which begins September 28th and lasts a month. The building will be illuminated by 3500 electric lights. Just imagine for a moment what a brilliant scene they will make!

All the products of the Northwest will be on exhibition, and the best full military band on the Pacific coast will give concerts day and evening. The Florenz troupe and the sisters Marcarte have been engaged, and they are wonders in aerial and acrobatic feats. Major Gantz the smallest man in the world will be on exhibition, and there will be many attractions of great interest. The price of admission will be only 25 cents. A perfect reproduction of Multnomah falls has been built in the building, with real water splashing and dashing, and visitors who attend are sure to be pleased and interested.

Excitement over the International yacht race, soon to be held in New York harbor, is reaching fever heat. Fabulous sums of money are being bet on the event. It is said that the big sloops are almost identical in the construction, and that the race will largely depend on the skill of the crews. A bungle on the part of either will result in the loss of the race.

Dr. J. A. Lamberson, of Lebanon, has during the past few months bought for shipment 340 tons of cascara bark for which he has paid $60 per ton or a total of $20,400. He has also bought 20 tons of Oregon grape root paying there for $1100. The doctor is also investigating the market for fir balsam, having bought 66 barrels of that article paying $12.50 per barrel.

In speaking of improved farms and methods the Rural Northwest has the following in point. It appears to be a fact that under existing circumstances the domestic animal which can be most easily and profitably kept by the wheat farmer of the Willamette valley is the sheep. In winter the sheep feeds upon the growing wheat without serious injury to the land. In summer a large part of its living can be obtained from rape grown upon the summer fallow. That the wheat farmers of the valley must commence growing clover or some similar plant to keep up the supply of humus and nitrogen in the soil is generally conceded, and the clover fields will supply the substitute of the food required to supplement that obtained from the fields of wheat and rape. There are many places in the valley where dairying will come in and there are other sections where cattle raising can be made to pay by reason of the proximity of wild pasture lands, but in the sections where the land is practically all under cultivation and devoted to the production of grain, the sheep is the animal which will come in with the greatest ease. Sheep were once much more numerous throughout the Willamette valley than they now are, but the time is not distant when it will have many more sheep than it ever had in the past.
