Hereafter, under a rule of the S. P. R. R. company no passengers are to be carried on freight trains on its roads.

Corvallis will make an effort to secure the State Poultry Show for 1901. As Albany has been awarded the show for two successive years, no doubt they will be willing to pass it on for the next.

Last week Editor Shutt of Heppher was hauled up before a J. P. and fined for using language unbecoming an editor, the complainant being one of his fellow townsmen. Therefore it seems to be necessary for an editor to at least use good language.

The increase in the price of dressed meats, together with the steady upward tendency of prices of live stock is sure to induce increased attention to stock raising and many who have almost gone out of business will again build up their flocks and after a time prices may go down below a profitable point. Just how stock raising is the business which shows best chances of profit.

The special mining edition of the Bohemia Nugget is a highly creditable piece of work in the interest of the Bohemia mining district. It is elegantly printed on fine paper and contains several fine illustrations of scenery in and about the mines, and a good deal of information relative to the Bohemia district which is of value to any who have an interest in development of Oregon's mines. The publishers have spared neither time nor expenses to produce this special issue and it is a work of which they can be justly proud.

A number of our citizens are attending the Farmers Short Course of the State Agricultural college at Corvallis. This short course, consists of lectures by the Professors of the college and is given free of charge to all who desire to receive the benefits of thoroughly trained knowledge. The lectures are devoted to strictly farm and stock interests, and have a tendency to improve methods of work and build up amongst us a better and more profitable system of farming and make the handling of a better grade of stock better understood. They show how to feed for bests results, not only the stock but the farm. They incite to an increased attention to the details of farm operations, and have a tendency towards better farms, better buildings and fences and general renovation all round. Better care of stock and tools and machinery is shown to be most profitable and strive to show that pleasure and profit go together. The short course is getting to be very popular and as a good deal of good has already resulted from them, larger good effects are confidently looked for. The attendance largely increases yearly and the interest is spreading Farmers Institutes also are becoming more popular and are tending to foster interest in the short course.

On every farm in the land poultry is kept, but a few only take interest enough in the fowls to provide for their wants properly. Poultry as a rule is not profitable because of want of care. The kind of poultry usually kept is, also, any-old-thing in that line. If best breeds or strains were kept and properly housed feed and cared for, much better results would be attained, and this adjunct to the farm stock would become a valuable one. The thrifty housewife would take more interest in the chickens if they were of better quality and her interest would tend more and more to lighten her household cares and bring other results tending to the betterment of the whole family. On this poultry question much is to be learned and interest in the raising of fowls stimulated by poultry shows. Everyone has a desire to do as well as their neighbors and to raise as fine birds. For this reason it is entertaining, and advancing to attend the poultry shows. A great deal can be learned as to best breeds for any special purpose, and facts will be presented in such tangible shape as to be easily grasped. Therefore we urge upon our readers the attendance upon the show at Albany this month. Better larger poultry will bring more money than those you now keep, for the best article always brings best prices.

Synopsis of Weather

A bulletin issued by the Oregon Experiment Station of the State Agricultural college says:

In general the weather conditions this December have not departed very far from normal.

This month has been considerably warmer than December of last year, the mean temperature, 41.66 degrees being 4 degrees higher, and 1.64 degrees above normal. The maximum and minimum temperatures for December, 1898, were 54 degrees and 18 degrees respectively; for December this year 51 degrees and 29 degrees. The difference, is largely due to the unusually low temperature last year.

Cloudiness and sunshine are about normal.

The rainfall, 7.57 inches, is 58 inch above normal. The only heavy rain 1.17 inches, occurred on the 10th.

The number of frosts is about normal, but in some localities they have been very light.

Barometric pressure has been above normal during the greater part of the month.

Fruit trees are in good condition.

Winter wheat is unusually forward for the season.

Ready for Business

The office of the Oregon Hop Growers Association has been opened for business in the city hall building, in Salem, with J. B. Winstanley as the representative. Telegrams regarding the effecting of sales, which ought to be very encouraging to the growers, have been received, and the board of directors feels greatly elated over the prospects of increased prices for the crop which has been placed in its custody. A thorough inquiry has developed the fact that instead of there being 300,000 bales of hops more than will be needed by the consumers there is a shortage of probably 40,000 bales. It is also worthy of note that there are not so many bales of hops in Oregon as the dealers had estimated.

President M. L. Jones of the association, reports that since the last report was made by him, 1100 bales of hops have been added to the association pool. One of the directors estimates that the association will handle 30,000 bales, which will be nearly all of the hops in the hands of the growers.

Reader, have you ever thought how difficult it is to find an unbroken family? Most of us are fragments of families, scattered here and there, struggling as best we may. We think of father, mother and children scattered like the mist of the morning. There is something in life which makes us forgetful of each other's welfare when we become separated. How often do you write to a brother and sister? We dare say if you will sit down and count the days you will be surprised to find that it has been months and perhaps years since you wrote to either of them. Once in a great while a letter passes telling of the dear love and asking to be forgiven for not writing oftener; then a long silence. A telegram is handed you after a while and your fingers tremble while you tear the envelope. You read that father, mother, sister or brother died on such a date. You go away by yourself, shed a profusion of tears, and regret a thousand times the negligence to the dear departed. The duties of life are so absent from our time and thoughts that we forget, when we should remember.—Ex.

The recent sale by the Ontario government of 2080 square miles of timber lands in the districts of Algoma, Nipissing and Rainy River was attended by all the leading American lumbermen in Michigan who bought freely, notwithstanding the terms of the sale prohibited the export of saw logs, the expectation being that the scarcity of lumber and increased demand in the United States would necessitate a larger demand of manufactured stuff from Canada.

Severe colds are quite prevalent among the people of this vicinity at this time.

Advantages of Roads

Bad roads constitute the greatest drawback to rural life, and for the lack of good roads the farmers suffer more than any other class. It is obviously unnecessary, therefore, to discuss the benefits to be derived by them from improved roads. Suffice it to say that those localities where good roads have been built are becoming richer, more prosperous and more thickly settled, while those which do not possess these advantages in transportation are either at a standstill or are becoming poorer and more sparely settled. If these conditions continue, fruitful farms may be abandoned and fertile lands go to waste.

Life on a farm often becomes, as a result of "bottomless roads," isolated and barren of social enjoyments and pleasures, and country people in some conditions suffer such great disadvantage that ambition is checked energy weakened and industry paralyzed.

Good roads, like good streets, make habitation along them most desirable. They economize time and force in transportation of products; reduce wear and tear on horses harness and vehicles and enhance the market value of real estate. They raise the value of farm lands and farm products and tend to beautify the country through which they pass. They facilitate rural mail delivery and are a potent aid to education, religion and sociability. Charles Sumner once said, "The road and the schoolmaster are the most important agents in advancing civilization.' —Mist.
