The loss will probably result in less carelessness by Brother Peery in the future.

The Franklin Butte Stock Company, held a business meeting last Saturday the purpose of which was to arrange plans for the coming season for their two fine horses. They will be kept in Scio exclusively. The company desires to improve the quality of the horses raised in this vicinity and believe that they have as good parent stock of their respective classes as can be found on the Coast to accomplish this purpose. The company certainly merits the patronage of all the horse breeders in this locality for the magnificent horses they have brought here and for the very moderate prices asked.

A SCIOAN IN TEXAS.

G. W. Morrow Tells About His Trip to the Lone Star State.

EDITOR OF THE NEWS:

This being the 28th day of January 1906, my memory runs back to the old town of Scio, the country surrounding, and those dear children of mine. As I told you I would write, I will now endeavor to make my word good.

Well, we had a nice trip down to this Texas country. We came to San Francisco; remained there three days, then came on to Los Angeles. Los Angeles is the garden spot of the world. If I had lots of money I surely would locate there. Our stay of two days was a great pleasure. Los Angeles has the best of equipped street car systems and is said to be the best street car town of the world. This locality seems to be the home of the orange and the orchards are simply grand with the trees laden with the fruit. From there we came on to San Antonio, Texas, and remained over night. San Antonio is but fifty miles from Parsell, the end of our journey, and the home of my dear niece. We came on the next morning, and the good folks of Texas are doing everything within their power to make it pleasant for us. Last Monday was very disagreeable. The wind howled and blew sand in clouds that was disagreeable in the extreme; but since that time we have been having the finest weather I ever saw in January—the sun out bright and warm. The sand in the roads here is from one to eight inches deep and is awful hard pulling for a team when loaded, and is much worse than our Oregon mud. The girls, my wife and myself went out about 15 miles to where my brother was laid to rest. To my pleasure I heard all the old-time settlers speak of him as being a fine man.

If my children were here, I think I would stay in Texas. I can buy good land for from $6 to $8 per acre. The principal crops raised here are cotton and corn. I have seen a good many farmers hauling their crops of cotton to the gin.

Well, I was at a round-up of 1500 head of cattle, from which ten carloads were cut out to be shipped to St. Louis, mostly the finest beef I have ever seen. They were loaded today. The cowboys worked in fine shape.

I saw the finest range in New Mexico that I have ever seen, but you can't buy it. The Government will lease it, but will not sell a foot of it. Water is scarce and hard to get. But I like the lay of the country fine. There are no green trees; nothing but desert as far as your eyes will carry you.

Give my regards to all my old friends and neighbors. Respectfully yours,
G. W. MORROW.

Disastrous Wreck on O. R. & N.

Tuesday a most disastrous wreck on the O. R. & N. Railway occurred at Bridal Veil. One passenger train was following another at an interval of three or four miles. A steampipe on the engine of the rear train burst, filling the cab with scalding hot steam, making it impossible for the engineer to see or get hold of the throttle to stop the train. The engineer made every possible effort to stop his train, scalding his hands and arms so badly that the skin and flesh fell off. As the grade was down, the run-a-way train gathered momentum and crashed into the forward train, which was standing still at Bridal Veil, full speed. The wreck resulted in the death of four passengers, one of whom was a brother of George Frost, of near this city. Mr. Frost went to Portland on Wednesday to take charge of the remains of his brother. As he was in considerable of a hurry when he passed through town, we did not learn any of the particulars of the accident. So far as we could judge from the reports in the Portland papers, the trainmen were not blamable in the least. The engineer and fireman of the uncontrolled engine did everything within their power to avert the disaster.

Livery Business Changes Hands.

This week F. J. Irvine, of the firm of Irvine & Myers, liverymen, sold his entire interest in the livery business in Scio, including the undivided half interest in the new and old barns, horses, buggies, carriages and wagons, to T. A. Richardson. Mr Irvine has been connected with the livery business in this city for the past 10 or 12 years. His accommodating nature, promptness in attending to business and friendly disposition has made him exceptionally popular with the public. Mr. Richardson, who succeeds Irvine, is a well known stockman, of this vicinity, and will come as near filling Frank's shoes as anybody in the community. The consideration in the transfer was $3250 and the business change will be made February 15, 1906.

Dissolution Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the firm of Irvine & Myers, proprietors of the livery business in Scio, will be dissolved on February 15, 1906. HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

EDITOR SANTIAM NEWS:

Knowing that you are interested in the welfare of the people of the county, I want to ask you to announce in your paper a public meeting of the fruit growers of this county to be held at the court house, in Albany, on Saturday, February 10, at 10 o'clock A. M. This meeting is called by me on the advice of a committee appointed at a previous meeting for the purpose of organizing a County Horticultural Society. From reports received from our fruit inspector we learn that there are a few locations in our county that are free from pests that are spoiling our fruit and killing the trees, and to be able to fight them intelligently, thoroughly and economically it has been thought best to bring about this organization of the people most interested. Anything you can do to assist in this matter will be greatly appreciated.
Yours very truly,
C. H. STEWART,
Judge.

The Spinsters' Convention.

The most laughable and ludicrous farce, or burlesque, was produced at the Public School hall last Saturday evening to a very good house and by home talent exclusively. The plot or scheme of the play is a convention of unmarried ladies, of untellable ages, whose sole aim was to secure a man; nor did they seem to care particularly as to the quality or kind of a man, either.

Prof. Anderson was cast as the "Miss President" of the convention and he seemed perfectly at home in the character. In fact, he could make a genuine "old maid" ashamed of herself, sustaining the character to the extent of singing a solo in falsetto in the most approved prima donna fashion. The fifteen or twenty old maids each and every one sustained the characters they were attempting to portray in a manner as natural as life. Mrs. B. F. Irvine, in a cornet solo, completely deceived a large portion of the audience, as the actual solo was produced from behind the curtain. E. C. Peery, as "Prof. Flimflam" with a machine for grinding up old maids and converting them into any desired condition, was quite a success. His servent, Mique (Roger Cain), who turned the crank of the machine, wrested a great deal of amusement by his comical contortions. The remodeling machine seemed to work highly successful, converting one the sisters into a young and handsome prima donna, another into a lovely little girl of six years, etc., until one of the old maids desired to be made over into a man. Dr. Flimflam decided that it would require two old maids to make a man. So two of them started through the remodeling process. This proved too big a contract for the machine and a breakdown resulted. As the break occurred at a wrong stage of the play, the extraordinary endeavors of Mique to hold the machine together until the "man" was ground out, was most laughable.

Taken as a whole, The Spinsters Convention was voted a complete success and resulted in putting $36.30 into the church treasury.

THE CULTIVATION OF HEMP.

Eugene Bosse Gives Method by Which a Profitable Crop is Assured.

EDITOR OF THE NEWS:

I wish you would publish the following, which I consider conveys all the information necessary to grow a profitable crop of hemp:

To grow a profitable crop of hemp, the land should not be too rich, as the plants would grow too rank unless and coarse. Select a piece of clean land that would grow a good crop of wheat, barley or oats, but do not work wet land.

It should be in condition as deep as plowed, which should be at least seven inches. If possible let the land rest one week after plowing before starting to pulverize. Then harrow crosswise and let rest for another week, when it is ready to refine and seed. Should the land have been plowed in the Fall, it should be disced or spring-toothed. The working of the land at intervals is to allow the air to penetrate through the loose soil and give it time to absorb its nutritive elements, which will prove most beneficial in the course of growing.

While the land should not be too rich it would be a detrimental idea to use a too poor or too weedy field, as the crop might be worthless on account of being too short or too weedy.

The best time for seeding in this district would be from the latter part of March to the 20th of April; but remember that the land should be thoroughly pulverized as deeply as plowed. On a nice, sunshiney day, sow 1½ bushels of seed per acre with a broadcast seeder, the teeth set to cover the seed two to three inches deep. To regulate the seeder, set as for wheat. Then measure one-half acre and weigh the seed needed, that is one-half of 1½ bushels. The next day, the land being dry, roll it and you will raise a profitable crop, that every farmer about Scio will want to grow next year.
EUGENE BOSSE.

GINSENG

Information Relating to the Richest Product of the Soil

"Professor Howard of the Missouri State Agricultural College, Says: "I advise American farmers to cultivate Ginseng. Big profits are realized. It is easily grown." A letter from the Pennsylvania State College says: "The supply of native Ginseng roots is rapidly diminishing and the price per pound increasingly increasing, while the constant demand for the drug in China shows that ginseng roots steadily market for ginseng in the future." American Consul General Wadman at Hong Kong writes: "There will be little difficulty in disposing of this country all the ginseng that is grown in America."

Ginseng is a staple on the market like wheat as corn, wheat and cotton. The present market price varies from $6.00 to $8.00 per pound, while the cost of production takes from $1.00. There is room to put a garden 4x4 grow several hundred dollars worth each year. The plant can be grown throughout the United States and Canada in any soil or climate that will grow ordinary vegetables. There are two planting seasons, Spring and Fall.

We are buyers and exporters of the dried product, and grow roots and seeds for planting purposes. Let us show you how to make money growing ginseng. You can write practical start in the business for a small outlay and soon have a fine income. Send a two-cent stamp today for our illustrated literature, telling all about it.
