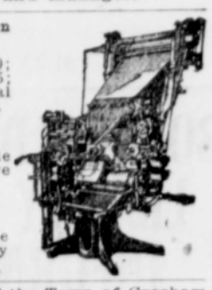
"The Linotype Way is the Way that Wins."



Official paper of the Town of Gresham Official paper of the Town of Fairview.

Entered as second-class matter March 3, 1911, at the Postoffice at Gresham, Oregon, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

READ THIS, THEN THINK.

You have already given to the Red Cross and you have bought a liberty loan bond.

Sure you have, and will probably be called upon to do the same thing over again. A great many men are giving their lives.

Now the cold weather has set in.

Many of the boys at the camps and at the front will need all the comforts that only the Y. M. C. A. can give them at any time, especially during the coming winter.

You must do your share to take care of and entertain them. There is one way to do it.

When an authorized person calls upon you, give as liberally as you can. Not dimes—dollars.

The boys at the front are our stalwart defenders. Giving them of your store is not only an act of human kindness—Golden Rule kindness—but also a part of conservation—conservation of human resources.

When you are called upon make it dollars, not dimes. And if the canvassers do not see you, don't chuckle about it and think you have put something over. Have an original idea of your own. Sit right down and write a check in favor of Rufus C. Holman and send it to the Outlook office. And if you don't want to send a check or haven't a bank account, send money. It is your responsibility.

And do your bit big. There are a big lot of dollar fellows and some five and ten dollar fellows, and a few who are bigger fellows than either of them—some are hundred dollar fellows.

Don't be a quitter or a slacker and go around feeling ashamed about it all winter.

All of the general aid for the Y. M. C. A. in eastern Multnomah is in the hands of Rufus C. Holman, county commissioner. The work has been concentrated here in the hands of H. L. St. Clair.

The limit for eastern Multnomah is $1000. Make it more.

Don't be a slacker.

"THE VOLUNTEER."

A week ago the Outlook published a poem with the above caption. It voices a complaint that all the cheers and good wishes are going to the national army. One of the volunteers asks, "why don't we get a 'hand out' once in awhile—or are we forgotten in the millions."

The complaint is natural. Parades of drafted men have been held, receptions and dinners have been given them, the press and public have praised their spirit again and again while nothing much has been done or said for the volunteer. But the reasons are not hard to find. In the first place the volunteers have offered their services and been taken into the army one by one while the drafted men have been taken by large groupes. In one case a fitting opportunity was offered for public honor, in the other there was no such opportunity.

Then, the unusualness of the situation created by the operation of selective conscription along with the volunteer system was another factor. The men who were obliged to go into the army by the government under a plan which was believed in the long run more equitable and just than the volunteer method, had to be made to realize that they were in a different class from the drafted men of any other nation or any other time. They were obliged to enter military service, it is true, but under conditions that reflected in no way on their patriotism or courage. The best way of making this plain was by doing public honor to the men. In the case of the volunteers this factor was not operative. The volunteers went of their own will. The honor and gratitude of their fellow citizens was taken for granted.

Perhaps the situation has worked out unfairly for the volunteer in that he has been left to imagine the feelings of his country for him, while toward the drafted men they have been more clearly expressed. The volunteer will be a good man for the war philanthropic societies to keep in mind when they are knitting socks or sending comforts of other kinds to men of the drafted armies.

Certainly the country intends to make no distinction between the volunteer and the conscripted man, and to neither class should reason be given for feeling that a distinction is, even unconsciously, being made.

TEN GALLONS.

The Outlook's exposure of the four per cent beer camouflage last Friday has stirred up a large proportion of the respectable element which is opposed to intoxicating beverages in any form. It will probably stir up the animals on the other side and there is likely to be "something doing."

The incident, mentioned in a Portland paper, of the soft drink emporiums being supplied with government licenses, has a new meaning now to some who have heretofore been wondering why and wherefore. While it cannot be asserted that the near beer cafes are selling anything containing as much as one-half of one per cent of alcohol, it is entirely possible that some of them are doing even more. The ownership of a government license protects them from prosecution in the federal court if they are doing such a thing and perhaps they are willing to take their chances with the other courts.

With full directions for making a beverage that is undoubtedly four per cent beer until it has been diluted there is a strong probability that much of it is being used. It is not known or asserted that any of it is being sold but there is a way to find out. Samples from all of the places where soft drinks are being sold can easily be had, and they can be analyzed. Then it will be known whether "The greatest home-made drink and beverage in the northwest" is a much maligned and harmless concoction or a real beer that is masquerading under another name. If it is a beer the presence of the government license can be explained. If it is only the Simple Simon stuff the license is not necessary for that particular beverage.

When you say your prayers these days you can say besides saying, "God help our army," the names of those who are gone. A wonderful galaxy of brave young men answer to this mental roll call and smile upon us from our memories of them, and they reassure us vastly as to the things that are worth while.

Since the first of the month all food that has been in storage thirty days or more must be labeled "cold storage goods," which, of course, has been the cause of a great decrease in the amount of "fresh" stuff on the market.

Possibly when a complete survey shall have been made, it will be found that the people who inflicted the Hoola craze and the jaz bands upon this country have not offended it very much more than the kaiser has.

If those profiteers continue boosting prices when there is nobody looking, they are going to have mighty little sympathy when they get into trouble and are looking for somebody to go on their bonds.

Thanksgiving without turkey is entirely possible. It has been done before, and this year would be a mighty good year to do it again. And, properly prepared, tripe is not so worse.

John Wanamaker says that the war must be fought behind the lines as much as in front. That's so, John, and many of us find that the enemy is charging all that the tariff will stand.

This being the chrysanthemum month it is a wonder that someone hasn't thought of a "mum" shower. It might be suggestive to some whom we are not mentioning by name.

Remember, too, that the new war revenue tax is the kind that you either have to pay or go to jail, and this is no time to be in jail even though the winter is coming on.

Now that ammunition is becoming so scarce Germany must regret all that perfectly good stuff it wasted on the Rheims cathedral and other inoffensive buildings.

We suppose General Sir Douglass Haig will suspend all operations for units in which Americans are serving until after those Christmas boxes arrive.

Minimum prices these days usually turn out to be what the public used to regard as worse'n maximum prices.

Resisting the food pledge is just such a thing as can be expected from the people who have been doing it.

"German agents are suspected" is getting to be almost as common as "the police are investigating."

Latest election returns from Ohio reveal that the cork-popping business will not be disturbed.

FREE SPEECH ABUSE.

Reports from the food pledge canvassers throughout the country show about 5 per cent of families who refused to sign the pledge. In School District Number 4, which includes Gresham, there are five families which thus refused, which leaves just 95 per cent of loyal ones if their pledges are sincere—and there is no evidence that they are otherwise. The canvassers met with varying degrees of excuses and obstinacy, from a plain refusal to abuse of themselves and the nation, not forgetting the president in some cases.

That five per cent of more or less disloyal people of the United States are making it just that much harder for the administration in its efforts to subdue autocracy and win the war. Those who abuse and vilify the agent of the government are perhaps laboring under the impression that in this country of free speech they can say anything they please and get away with it. They should not forget true politeness, even though they do not agree with the idea of food conservation and all that it implies to our armies in the field, the allies of this nation, and even to those who remain at home.

It is no time for free speech as such people understand it. They are mostly aliens who never before enjoyed free speech. We are in the war and it is our business to win it. Every pro-German who can make his influence felt is supporting the enemy as against our men in the trenches. The only effect of their words is to prolong the war, and to sacrifice the lives of the brave men who are fighting the battle for civilization and human liberty, which includes the free speech they are so readily abusing.

It is, too, a great mistake to think that the German propaganda in this land is a thing of the past. We know that it is active in Russia and Italy. We know that it is still at work here. The recent food conservation canvas has made it glaringly apparent. There are all the old efforts to create dissension among the allied powers, to stir up class hatred in the various nations, to make it appear that nothing is being done—even the Red Cross is made the victim of German lies. The pr paganda is still at work, and none the less effectively since it is being driven to cover.

There's a welcome for those disappointed New York women awaiting them in Oregon.

The present war has been the biggest boost for the safety razor that it ever had.
