WANTS TO KNOW IF INDIANS STILL LIVE NEAR TALENT

An eastern boy who wishes to know about the habits of the Indians around Medford has written as follows to Harold Corliss of Talent. Mr. Corliss recently discovered a page from an old fashion journal buried in the heart of an oak tree and figured by the rings of the tree that the paper had been there fifty years. The story was printed in the Mail Tribune and copied throughout the country. Here is what the boy writes:

"Inclosed you will find a piece of paper which was in the Saturday Blade telling about you finding an old fashion book in a tree. Is true? It says you have a ranc,, out there. Would you please tell me something about your ranch and how many cowboys are on your How many cows or horses have you got and are there Indians around your place and do they stay out in the woods like in olden times or do they stay on the reservations Do you think I could get a job on yours or somebody elses ranch?I like to be a cowboy. I wish you could send me a picture of you or your ranch or any of your cowboys. John Crossin, Old Forge, Pa."

Mr. Corliss is also in receipt of a letter from The Delineator company asking if it is possible that the fashion paper is one from their publication. They are about to celebrate their fiftieth anniversary and would be willing to pay for Mr. Corliss' find. As there is no name on the page a comparison of type with the old files in the Delineator office will have to be made.

May Robson Here Sunday Evening

May Robson

May Robson, America's leading comedienne, will appear in "A Night Out" at the Nat tomorrow evening.

Behind this announcement of the only big theatrical event in Medford since the burning of the "opery house" lies a story which illustrates the memory and appreciation of this popular actress. Last time Miss Robson visited in Medford she met with an accident a few moments before the curtain was to rise and the audience had to be dismissed. She stayed over in Medford for a day to have her thumb, which was broken in a fall down stairs, attended to and the fact that she had disappointed a large audience weighed heavily on her mind.

On this trip she confidentially expected to visit Medford but as there was no theater here, Grants Pass was put on the schedule. In Grants Pass Friday Miss Robson insisted that if there was any hall in Medford large enough to stage the play that arrangements be made at once. She stands all the risk financially and breaks her rigid rule of never playing on Sunday in order to make up for the disappointment of last year and to show her appreciation of the many kindnesses shown her in this city.

In her new play, "A Night Out," of which she is co-author, she has every opportunity to develop that fund of clean-cut humor and that world of brilliant and thrilling pathos which has made her famous. She will impersonate a young-old woman, broad minded, free from affectation and possessing a keen sense of humor, nothing absurd or ridiculous escapes her attention, and being fond of excitement as a mild stimulant, she persuades her two grandsons whom she adores, into all sorts of extravagance, and a visit to a restaurant of shady character, for a dinner, is the climax of her adventure.

From this juncture the story moves rapidly, in which the love and devotion of the young people is sustained by the influence of the jolly, whole-souled granmum.

JUVENILE JAIL FOR YOUNGSTERS

A detention room for juvenile offenders in the city has been arranged for by Chief of Police Hittson and in it will be confined the youngsters who fail to heed the curfew law. If picked up on the street after hours without a proper excuse they will be locked up to appear in the mayor's court later and explain.

It is reported by Chief Hittson that a number of children have been given blanket excuses by parents covering any and all hours of the night. As fast as these excuses are obtained the parents will be seen and the matter explained. Children out after hours must have a written permit from their parents for that particular night.

A number of excuses are believed forged by the children and an investigation will follow each excuse to which suspicion attaches.
