Senator Eddy Refutes Charges.

To the Editor:

We had intended to close our campaign with the publication of the Republican ticket and nothing more; however, inasmuch as an unwarranted personal attack has been made upon, Mr. Johnson of Grants Pass, one of the attorneys for the grand jury, we herewith publish a letter from Senator Eddy of Roseburg, associate counsel, which letter is self-explanatory.

Mr. Frank P. Farrell,
Chairman Republican Central Committee of Jackson County,
Medford, Oregon.

Dear Sir: I am in receipt of your letter of the 30th instant enclosing a political advertisement published in the Daily News of Medford, in which certain charges are made against Judge Thomas and Hon. J. N. Johnston of Grants Pass, and myself, as special prosecutors in connection with the finding of the eleven indictments against District Attorney Chaney. I have not for a long time seen a more unjust or unfounded attack than that contained in this advertisement. I will endeavor to answer these charges in a systematic way.

First—It is asserted that the two prosecutors conferred long and often with Judge Thomas in his chambers and that there is every evidence that their acts were his acts and that they did what he wanted done. It is true that the special prosecutors had some interviews with Judge Thomas, and it would be impossible at this time to recall everything that was said. Some of these "interviews" were doubtless purely social in character. I know that this is true with reference to myself, as being an old friend of Judge Thomas I found some occasions when my presence was not needed in the grand jury room to visit with him and talk about old times. At other times we may have considered the question of calling in an outside judge to try the Chaney cases; the possible date of trial and other things that are naturally and ordinarily discussed between a prosecuting officer and the presiding judge. No advice given the grand jury by the special prosecutors was dictated or suggested by Judge Thomas. He left the matter of advising the grand jury as to the law and the whole conduct of the case, including the trial, entirely to the prosecutors. He repeatedly said that he wanted nothing in the case except a fair and impartial investigation and administration of the law. That was his emphatic attitude from first to last. He never made the shadow of a suggestion for the shielding, whitewashing or persecuting of any person whomsoever.

Second—It is stated that when the grand jury got to a point where they wanted nine questions answered the special prosecutors got into a big hurry to close the investigation. This statement is not true. The investigation never was hurried at any time but dragged on for weeks, and in fact the sifting out of the evidence was so tedious a process that many persons began to criticize the grand jury because the investigation lasted so long. As the grand jury itself well knew the matter of closing the investigation was entirely in their hands.

Third—As ten of the indictments against Chaney have not yet been disposed of, I am not in position as one of the prosecutors to discuss the opinions given to the grand jury as to the evidence or as to the probability of being able to secure convictions upon the various indictments.

Fourth—It was the duty of the special prosecutors to advise the grand jury as to the law and when the evidence disclosed facts wheih indicated improper conduct of any official, the acts were compared with the statutes to determine whether or not a crime had been committed. Every lawyer, including those who are opposing Judge Thomas, must know that there are no crimes in the state of Oregon except those that are defined by statute, and there are many irregularities in official conduct that do not constitute crimes. The special prosecutors had a delicate and important task in this connection, but we had no desire or motive or interest except to try to apply the facts to the law. I may say also that we were quite conscious that public sentiment was severely divided with reference to the guilt or innocence of Mr. Chaney, and from time to time there were indications that members of the grand jury were receiving suggestions as to the law from persons other than their duly constituted legal advisers. These suggestions appeared to come from both of the opposing factions, and the tendency was to make it difficult for us to advise the grand jury as to the law, because of the minds of some of them, and I may say especially so of the forewoman, being more or less biased by opinions and suggestions as to the law which it appeared must have come from outside advisers.

Fifth—It is said in the statement referred to: "We are demanding to know whether the taking of these moneys was a crime, and if so, what crime . . . No satisfactory advice came from these prosecutors." The truth is that the special prosecutors made a most painstaking search of the statutes and endeavored to find law that would fit certain transactions wheih appeared to the grand jury and the prosecutors as being irregular. At all times we conscientiously and frankly and openly advised and discussed with the grand jury what the statutes provided and theh bearing upon the facts which appeared. No unprejudiced mind can honestly say that the prosecutors were in any way unfair or lax or disposed to shield any person whomsoever. As I have indicated above, some of these matters should not be discussed in detail by me until all of the pending indictments have been disposed of. I desire to observe all of the proprieties of my position in the matter, and I am also somewhat constrained by the fact that these statements are set forth as coming from a member of the "gentler" sex. I might say something to a man that I do not wish to say on this occasion.

Sixth—It is complained that the grand jury were advised that they could not in a report make charges again persons where the evidence was not sufficient to justify indictment. The grand jury was advised, and properly so, that the law defines their duties and that they are to make use of what is known as presentment and indictment; that th claw requires that their proceedings shall be kept secret and that to publish a report seriously reflecting upon any citizen, where there is not sufficient evidence to justify an indictment, would be going far beyond the powers of a grand jury. It was opinted out to the grand jury that when there is an indictment found the person accused has a day in court and an opportunity to meet the charges. He is not provided any day in court or any method of meeting the charges of a grand jury report, unless it be by the filing of a libel suit. All these matters were fairly and frankly explained to the grand jury, and this advice was just and proper. The law does not contemplate that a grand jury will run amuck like a sensational newspaper and blast the names of private citizens and public officials when there is not sufficient evidence to justify an indictment and a hearing in court. Such a course would be wholly repugnant to the very spirit of the grand jury system.

Seveth—As to the report which was placed before the grand jury by the special prosecutors, this was done because the grand jury came together to consider such a report and requested that it be prepared for them. The whole matter of the reason for preparing the report and what the grand jury would do with it was fully discussed with the grand jury, and there is no occasion for any person to have any misunderstanding or to throw out any insinuations with reference to the matter. The grand jury was told plainly that the special prosecutors had no duty in the matter except to prepare such report as they could and would lawfully make, while at the same time advising them that a "report" could not be made to supply the office of an indictment.

Eighth—Neither Judge Thomas nor th especial prosecutors undertook to "block" the grand jury investigation or to cause anything to be done which was not in the interests of justice and good citizenship. Judge Thomas at all times respected the position of the grand jury ad of the special prosecutors and never by any suggestion did he attempt to control the proceedings in any way. His course in the whole matter was highminded and above reproach, and if the people of his district are to defeat him because of such misrepresentations as are contained in this advertisement, I hope that they will succeed in choosing a successor who will discharge his official duties with the same impartiality and judicial purity.

Yours very truly,
B. L. EDDY.
