H. N. Deemer, owner of the Provolt store, is known as a great joker. So on April Fools' day he kept his eyes opened that he might not get caught at his own game. Late in the afternoon a customer of the gentler sex entered and after some purchases started out. She remembered, "Oh, yes, give me as much candy as you can for two bits."

"Do you want suckers for the kids?" "Oh, just anything you can give me for two bits," the woman answered. As she started out the door the ever-courteous but unsuspecting proprietor, noticing she had not paid for the candy, called after her, "Do you want this charged?"

"Oh no, your two bits are on the counter."

Still unsuspecting, he walked back to the counter and found his two bits all right, but they were bits for a bridle.
