Christian Church To Add Service

First Chrristian church will hold two morning worship services beginning Sunday, September 7.

Two services will make possible attendance by many who, otherwise, have been unable to come, according to the pastor, the Rev. Shelvy Anglemyer. He said the two morning services will be similar with the same sermon topic and communion.

The congregation voted some time ago to establish the two service program with the hope that a greater number of members and friends in the community could be served.

The Christian Men's fellowship of the church will meet Thursday, August 21, at 7 p.m. at the parsonage for a dinner session served by the Women's fellowship. Clarence Hershiser and his committee will arrange the program.

Apostolic Faith Concert Sunday

The public is invited to be present this Sunday at the old city park, West Main and Holly streets, by musicians and singers of the Apostolic Faith church. The concert will be at 3 p.m.

With the Rev. Norman Allen directing, the orchestra and chorus will present a program of sacred and classical selections.

Included in the orchestra program will be "Overture" by Lavalee; andante movement of "Surprise Symphony" by Haydn; "Adoration" by Borowski, and Under The Double Eagle," by Wagner. The choir will sing "I Walked Where Jesus Walked," by O'Hara and "Give Unto the Lord," by Cadman.

As We Live

By ELIZABETH HURLOCK, PH.D.

NO HUSBAND SHOULD FEEL JEALOUS OF WIFE'S FAMILY

A young wife is likely to retain some of the strong attachments for her family that she has had throughout her girlhood. That should not disturb a young husband, as it has disturbed the man who wrote:

Q. "I have been married for eight months and my wife and I are very much in love with each other. But I am disturbed that my wife seems too attached to her family. This has made me feel that I have not given her full happiness. I feel that her happiness is complete only when she is in close contact with her folks. I am very fond of her folks but her attachment has upset me. Am I being foolish or jealous, or have I a right to feel this way?"

(A) If a woman is devoted to her family, a most commendable thing, you can't expect her to sever all family ties because she marries. It will take your wife some time to get adjusted to living away from the parental roof and to standing on her own feet.

Dr. Hurlock

Don't be jealous. The love a person has for parents and brothers and sisters is very different from the love she has for a husband. Only if your wife shows that she prefers her family to you have you any cause for concern.

Try gradually to wean your wife away from her dependency on her family for companionship and happiness. Get her interested in civic affairs and in running your home. If, in time, you have a family, your wife will be so busy that she will not have time to be lonely.

Now, as a bride, she has plenty of time and not much to do. As a result, she goes home to her family while you are at work and when she feels lonely. This is all right now but try to discourage it from developing into a habit.

Do this by suggesting errands for you and the house during the day, plans to do things with her friends, and some work for the church or the community. Never let her see that you resent the time she spends with her family. This is likely to cause hard feelings on their part and bring a rift in your relationship with them.

A Nichols' Worth of---

Comment On This and That

BY HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Feature Writer

Washington— (U.P.) —If you think it has been hot around your house this summer, you ought to hear what goes on in the Mato Grasso region of Brazil.

Harmon Nichols

A fellow I know named Al O'Camp has just come back from there after nearly two years of fighting crocodiles, snakes, and beasts of the jungles.

It gets up to 120 degrees there, he said, but the natives seem to like it. At night when the temperature "cools off" to around 105, the native women cuddle up in their hammocks—after building a fire under same.

Along about midnight, O'Camp said, it really gets chilly—down around 101, so all of the natives gather in the river and stand in the water the rest of the night. The water is much warmer than the air.

No Mosquitos

One good thing though—no mosquitos.

O'Camp, an Irish-Spanish movie producer, was in Brazil filming a picture for United Artists called "Strange World." He and his crew had quite a time. Three natives were killed while the film was being made. They lost their rations while crossing a stream and became ill trying to subsist on native food, which included bread made from the roots of a tree, according to the producer.

There was the daily fear of the crocodiles and other jungle creatures. The crew, during the two-year stint, covered 10,000 miles by horse and native river craft.

Fish Devour Pig

One of the dangerous hazards was the pirana, the most voracious of jungle river fish. The fish are no more than six inches long, but they travel in schools running into the thousands. One school attacked and devoured a 250 pound pig in 55 seconds by the clock. They have been known to kill people, too.

The film was made in cooperation with the governments of Brazil, Bolivia, and Peru.

Before he made this his first picture, O'Camp had quite a career.

O'Camp has exploited pictures all over the country and in Canada and Latin America.

"We had an interesting two years along the Amazon," he said, "but I don't known whether I'd like to go through it again. Kind of warm in Washington, too, isn't it?"

Direct Ratio Between Night Light, Crimes

Cleveland, O. — (U.P.) —There is a direct ratio between the amount of light on a street at night and the number of crimes committed, according to the National Street and Traffic Safety Lighting Bureau.

Edmond C. Powers of the bureau said that during a 3000-mile tour of southeastern states, every city and town visited showed a sharp decrease in nocturnal crimes when adequate street lighting was introduced.

Traffic deaths, too, showed drops of up to 50 per cent in the cities where lighting had been improved, Powers said.
