CASSATT IS BACK

Investigation of Pennsylvania Road to Be Thorough.

HE CRITICIZES THE PRESS

Anti - Corporation Sentiment, He Says, Created by Political Parties, Results in Indiscriminate Attacks on Vested Rights.

PHILADELPHIA, June 1.-A. J. Cassatt, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, arrived at his home a Haverford, Pa., a suburb of this city, from Europe about noon today. He will be at his office in Philadelphia tomorrow morning. This evening Mr. Cassatt gave to the Associated Press the following statement:

Mr. Cassatt said he had returned home to take part in the investigation by the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company into the matters that had been disclosed during his absence in the proceedings before the Interstate Commerce Commission. He had received only brief cable reports from the office of the company and knew nothing of the details, but from these reports and from cables to the London press he had learned that charges had been made against certain officials of the acceptance of bribes from coal operators.

The board would investigate all such charges exhaustively and if any officer or employe should be found guilty of corrupt practices he would be summarily

Referring to the testimony of certain officers that they held stock of coal com-panies and to the inference drawn by the newspapers that favoritism and discrimination on a large scale had been practiced for the benefit of the companies whose stocks were thus held, Mr. Cassatt said that while such ownership by officers in a position to exercise favoritism, and therefore liable to suspicion, was no doubt inadvisable and unfortunate, it was not an offense in Itself, if the stocks were not an offense in tiselt, it the stocks were properly acquired and were not contrary to the laws of the company; in fact, the management had in the earlier years of the company encouraged the officers to aid in the development of industries along

The wrong, if any had been done, was in the alleged, favoritism. There could be no favoritism in rates, as shippers of coal and all other freights were on an absolute equality; all paid the full tariff rates without rebate.

ates without rebate.

Mr. Cassatt made himself personally responsible for the absolute correctness of this statement. If there was any distributation it could only be in the distribution of empty coal cars, and, so far as he knew, no proof had been produced that the officers concerned had been guilty of such favoritism. The board would, however, also inquire carefully into these matters and if there had been into these matters and if there had been any wrongdoing would take proper action, but it would not sacrifice faithful and efficient officers to a manufactured and mistaken public opinion.

The board would also no doubt consider the general question of propriety of the ownership by officers and employes of stocks of coal and other companies using the Pennsylvania Railroad lines and making regulations in relation. lines and making regulations in relation thereto. There had always been a shortthereto. There had always been a short-age of coat cars during periods of every year and in recent years this condition had been aggravated by the great in-crease in the production of coal, notwith-standing the very large increases the company had made to its equipment.

This had given rise to many complaints, and, as a natural consequence, of charges of discrimination. If the output of coal should increase in the same ratio as in the past few years, it might not be posthe past few years, it might not be pos-sible to supply sufficient equipment to avoid a shortage in the car supply at times. In view of this and of the sus-plicion which such ownership would cre-ate, officers having to do with the distribution of empty cars ought not to own coal stocks, but to probabil all officers and employes from holding stock of com-panies having business with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company would practically bar them from investing in the stock of the companies located in the state of Penn sylvania and in a half-dozen other states subject was troublesome and com plicated. It would do no good, but harm, to adopt unworkable and unenforceable regulations. The question must be han-dled in a reasonable and practical way and Mr. Cassati had no doubt the board would succeed in solving it satisfactorily and in formulating proper rules of con-duct in this respect for the officers. Though the testimony before the com-mission might disclose instances of in-dividual misconduct, and though an effort, seemingly organized, had been made to place the management in the most unfavorable light, Mr. Cassatt asserted that the company's affairs were honest-ly conducted in the interest of the sharepolders and with a full recognition of its duty to the public.

The company had in its employment over 160,000 men, who, in character, efficiency and devotion to its interests had, in their respective spheres, no superiors anywhere. The management had in the past shown itself entitled to the confiof the public and it should be d now to deal properly with the

Mr. Cassatt thought, too, that the management deserved better treatment than it had received from the press and particularly from the press of the com-pany's home state. It had rendered an immense service to the public and to the cause of honesty and decency in the conduct of transportation business when, in the early part of the year 1900, two years before the passage of the Elkins act, it gave notice that no more rebates would be paid and that all shippers, great and small, would be placed upon a basis of perfect equality.

It had thus inaugurated a movement which, having been joined in by other railroads, and aided later by the passage of the Eikins act, had destroyed a vicious system almost as old as the railroads themselves and which had become so deeply rooted that many experienced railroad mon doubted the possibility of eradimanagement had done other things that deserved the commendation of the public and of the press. It had taken the company out of politics and it had done away with the free pass evil. But the press generally, in its present hostility to the radroads, was only falling in line with an anti-corporation public sentimen which had been created by some of the leaders of the two great political parties who were trying to outbid each other for popular support by attacking large vested interests indiscriminately. If this course

Poles to Have a Church.

A Polish Roman Catholic Church for this city is now an assured fact, and all details were arranged yesterday at an enthusiastic meeting held at the home of Andrew Czerwinski, on East Seventeenth street. The accomplishment of the end sought is due chiefly to the liberal donation of Archbishop Christie, who offered a valuable block and building on the East Side at Irving and Twentieth streets for the church.

Over 50 members of the local Polish colony assembled, electing Mr. Gastomski as chairman. After several short ap-peals by those present for completion of the work which has been needlessly dethe work which has been needlessly de-layed for several years, due to a strong opposition on the part of some of the Boles. Father Charles Sieroski addressed the meeting, deploring the fact that the Pollsh people have no church of their own. He gave a personal contribution of $200 toward the church, and in less than five minutes nearly $1500 was pledged by the local colony.

The meeting denounced the Polish So-cialists in this city who have been hincialists in this city who have been hin-dering the erection of the church. All assembled pledged themselves to carry the work now commenced on to success and a committee was appointed to solicit further contributions for the Polish

COURTHOUSE SCHEME NIPPED IN THE BUD.

Citizens of Bend Seek to Prevent Construction of Public Building in Prineville.

MADRAS, Or., June 1—(Special.)— An injunction has been served on Judge Beil and Commissioners Stearns and Powell of this county, enjoining them from letting any contract for the con-struction of a new courthouse. The suit to enjoin is brought by Charles S. Benson, of Bend, acting for numer-cust taxpayers throughout the county, S. there was but little time to spare when the papers were served.

The purpose of the County Court to let a contract for a new Courthouse was not discovered until about ten days ago, when the notice of the Coun-ty Clerk, calling for bids for the con-tract for construction of a new Courthouse, according to the plans of a Sa-lem architect, was discovered in the classified ad department of a Portland paper. No official notice had been paper. Great indignation has been aroused throughout Western Crook County by this action of the County Court. The western portion of the county comprises the large irrigation section and the new wheat belt of the county, and is the most populous section of the county. Throughout this section the construction of any new county buildngs at this time.

The temporary injunction was secured upon the grounds that the construction of a new Courthouse at this time would necessitate an indebtedness of to exceed $5000, which would be in violation of section 10 of article 11 of the constitution of Oregon, which provides that "no county shall create any debts or liabilities which shall singly or in the aggregate exceed the sum of $5500, except to suppress insurrection or repei invasion." The county has or repel invasion." The county has in its general fund something less than $20,300, while a Courthouse such as is contemplated would, it is believed, cost in the neighborhood of $190,000. The fact that there has been no notice of the intention to build a new Courthouse and no notice of the call for bids published in any paper in the county, is also alleged in a separate count as a reason for the granting of count as a reason for the granting of

SERMON TO YOUNG PEOPLE

Rev. William Upshaw Speaks on "Royal Road to Happiness."

"The Royal Road to Happiness" was the subject of the sermon last night by Rev. William Upshaw at the Mississippi-Avenue Congregational Church, taking for "Happy is the man that findeth He spoke of the different roads in life that do not lead to happiness, re ferring to Frank Lamb, a Portland boy, who was driven by order of the court from the home of his birth because he had traveled the wrong road so long that he was no longer regarded fit for Portand society.

He also spoke of happiness as a great paradox, as it can coexist with trial, sor-row and poverty, and can grow in any soil and live under any conditions. Pass-ing on, Rev. Upshaw said: "Happiness has a number of clever inf-tators. Gratification, a harmony between desire and possession, is sometimes taken for happiness, and while it may have an element of happiness, it is not happiness Satisfaction is perfect identity of our desire and possession and exists only as long as this perfect union and unity can

Dissatisfaction, in its highest sense, is the keynote of our advance. Content is a greatly overrated virtue, a kind of diluted despair. Content makes the trained individual swallow vinegar and Content makes the try to smack his lips as if it were nectar. It is a mental and moral chloroform. There are times when, a man should be content with what he has, but never with what he is. Pleasure sometimes tries to imitate happiness, but pleasure is temporary, happiness continuous, Pleasure may have its dregs and leave a dark brown taste in the mouth, but none can be found in the cup of happiness.

"Man is the only animal that can be really happy, but no man can make his own happiness the one object in life and attain it any more than he can jump on the fag end of his own shadow. iump on the fag end of his own shadow. The basis of happiness is the love of something outside of self—the inward quality rather than the outward show, like the old violin that may be brown and black and split and splintered and mended again and again and homely to the eye as anything can possibly be and yet worth a thousand dellars, while other violins may be edged with sliver, inlaid with gold and covered all over with mother of pearl and perfectly gorgeous to a baby's eye, and yet, so far as producing music, not worth 30 cents. You can buy pleasure and can become satisfied, but nature never put real happiness on the bargain counter.

"There is a 'royal Load to happiness.' It less in consecration concentration, con-lies in consecration concentration, con-quest. Consecrate your life to the servquest. Consecrate your life to the serv-ice of others, to some noble mission, and then concentration will cut away all the shams and pretences and reduce it to its truest essentials, and when chance to win fame, wealth, success as the attainment of your heart's desire by sacrifice of honor or principle, comes to you it does not effect you long enough to be even a temptation. That is conquest, and is part of the royal road to happiness, And then when you can stay alone with your conscience and get its approval without principles, you are beginning to essentials, and when chance to out using force, you are beginning to know what happiness is."

LINCOLN J. BEECHEY.

Lincoln J. Beechey, the intrepid 19-year-old boy aeronaut who was injured by the collapse of an airship while making a flight over Luna Park, in Cleveland, O., became famous at the Lewis and Clark Exposition and is known all over the United States because of the wonderful feats accomplished by birn at Fair. With the airship City of Portland, he made one successful flight after another over the Exposition grounds, and his wonderful exhibitions were witnessed by thousands of persons. Lincoln Beechy and the airship City of Portland furnished probably the most remarkable attraction of the Lewis and Clark Ex-

The greatest feat accomplished by Beechey, and one which is recognized as being the most wonderful flight ever made by an airship, was when he alighted on top of the Chamber of Commerce building. Leaving the acrodrome at the Exposition grounds, he directed the chara-shaped craft straight to the Chamber of Commerce building, on the roof of which he brought it to rest. There he was met by an assemblage of representative citizens who showered him with congratulations. Casting loose, he then made a short circle of the business district and returned to the Fair grounds, landing with perfect case. He was in the less than three-quarters of an hour.

Although of an unassuming disposition and very bashful among strangers, Beechey was almost idolized by the employes at the Exposition grounds. All who witnessed his exhibitions could not help being impressed with the great courage of the lad and were filled with admiration for him. Those who knew him person Beechey and that he felt as much at case thousands of feet in the air as he did when he was standing upon solid earth. But his courage was not of the reckless and daredevil type, as he has the keenest judgment and is self-possensed to an unusual degree when it comes to airship flights. He was thoroughly wedded to his work and unless he is killed he will undoubtedly continue his experiments as long as he is physically able to do so. Captain Baldwin, the California aeronaut, travels with Beechey and is his instructor. Because of his heavy weight. Captain Baldwin never makes any more ascensions and leaves that part of the work to Beechey.
