Berlin — (AP) — A group of German military officers Saturday celebrated the 13th anniversary of their attempt to assassinate Adolf Hitler.

The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Why Many People Fail

For years, I have been noting that many of the down-and-out and chronically ill people who came into a big city clinic have failed in life because they were not as sensible and sane as they should have been. They were too much like some of their peculiar relatives. Now comes a Yale sociologist, A. B. Hollinshead, reporting to the Institute of Preventive Psychiatry, that if one goes into a poor part of a city and studies the least successful 18 per cent of the people in the city, one finds among them 55 per cent of the mentally disturbed people in the whole community. On the other hand, if one goes into the better part of the city, where the fine homes are, and where the most successful 28 per cent of the people live, one will find only 18 per cent of the people (in the city) who are mentally odd and mixed-up.

Dr Alvarez

These facts can, of course, be interpreted by different persons in different ways to suit them, but my impression is that the figures mean what one would expect — namely, that a man born with a low degree of intelligence and a mixed-up mind is so handicapped that he tends to drift down to the lowest strata of society. Often it is alcohol that gets him down and keeps him down, and the reason he drinks is because his poor nervous inheritance makes him so tense and nervous, and so unhappy and insecure.

Psychoanalysis Not Yet Entirely Scientific

I just read that at the recent meeting of the Academy of Psychoanalysis, Dr. Roy R. Grinker, director of the Institute for Psychosomatic and Psychiatric Research and Training, of Michael Reese Hospital, in Chicago, did a very brave and commendable thing. According to the report, he told his fellows that psychoanalysis had been allowed to drift away from the biologic and social sciences, and had ignored scientific principles of strict testing of theories against facts. As he said, it has become too much a "closed system," isolated from other scientific disciplines. He believes now it can be reformed and made into a science.

As some analysts have told me privately, while there is much of value that Freud discovered: he also did many quite unscientific things, such as building a huge structure of theory on the basis of his weird interpretation of one case history or one dream. A scientist would never have published such a theory until he had tested it many times against more facts obtained from many patients. Actually, the other day when I read in a recent book a comment on one of Freud's interpretations of a dream, I said to myself, "No, no one, not even Freud, could have written such utter foolishness." So I reached up to my shelf and, pulling down the third volume of Freud's Collected Papers, I found the quote was right. There I found the astounding material which makes me wonder how sane the man could have been.

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail.

Navy Intelligence Standards Raised

Washington — (AP) — The Navy has raised its intelligence standards in an effort to speed the discharge of more than 15,000 sailors.

The Navy's action was prompted by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson's recent order reducing the manpower strength of the armed forces by 100,000. To comply with the directive, the Navy will have to cut 15,900 from its rolls by next January.

Navy Secretary Thomas S. Gates Jr. told Navy commanders to force the discharge of enlisted men with scores of less than 42 on the Navy's "General Classification Test." Highest possible score is 77; the Navy average is 48.9.

The Navy also said it intends to reduce its officer strength by 1,635 mainly by releasing junior reserve officers now on active duty.

Red Destroyer Seen In Pacific Waters

Pearl Harbor, T.H.—(AP)—Pacific Headquarters reported Saturday two Soviet destroyers and a tanker were sighted north of the Philippines, apparently enroute to the Russian naval base as Vladivostok.

A Navy spokesman said it was first time Soviet naval surface ships had been seen in Pacific waters, but he said no great significance was attached to it.

Rear Adm. Paul D. Stroop, commander Task Force 72, reported from the U.S.S. Pine Island that the Soviet ships were sighted Friday in the Luzon Straits about 250 miles north of the Philippines.
