The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Medical Education Week

April 20-26 will be Medical Education Week, when the officers of six sponsoring organizations will bring to the attention of the country the great advances that are being made in medical education, and the great need for more funds to maintain our high standards. Today, we have 83 approved medical schools and soon we will have a few more. These schools are training 29,003 medical students.

Dr. Alvarez

Prior to 1910, there were in the United States over 300 diploma mills, places in which practically anyone could quickly get a medical degree. Fortunately, the disclosures of the Flexner report caused so much public disgust with these institutions that nearly all of them closed their doors. Only a few such schools are still open. Then most states passed laws making it harder for the "graduates" of such places to get a license to prey on the public.

I was interested the other day that our medical schools, besides training physicians, provide instruction for 62,889 other people, among them students of dentistry, pharmacy, nursing, and laboratory technics; also, interns, residents, and persons working toward advanced degrees.

Practically all approved medical schools require at least three years of college study, and 51 schools require four years. Only a small portion of the $200,000,000 needed by the schools in one year comes from students' fees. Hence, each year, much money has to be raised from several sources. Every one of us in this country should be concerned with this problem of supplying the people with enough well-trained physicians. We never know when the day will come when we, ourselves, will be ill in bed, in great need of a skilled physician.

Oregonian Tells Indo Experiences

Roseburg—(AP)—A 53-year-old Winston, Ore., man just back from Sumatra said Monday the Bechtel Company and employees "co-operated without choice" with government troops and rebels in the Indonesian civil war.

Lyle Rice, a logger for Bechtel, left Indonesia March 13. He had been building a road to the oil rich Sumatra fields leased by Caltex Oil in the area of Dumai on the east coast of Sumatra.

Rice said: "The company was forced into turning over the supplies and buildings as far as I knew. Government forces took over pre-fab steel buildings and moved troops into them; commandeered trucks; took boats over—anything they wanted. I had a truck taken from me. We co-operated without choice."

Rice added that the government forces were equipped with Russian cars and trucks. The soldiers were armed with "burp" guns.

Dulles Sees Early Pre-Summit Talks

Washington — (AP) — Secretary of State John Foster Dulles Monday voiced hope that pre - summit diplomatic talks with Russia will begin "in a few days" and that they may lead to "substantially" steps toward disarmament.

But Dulles quickly said he was not sure this would be the case.

He made the remarks in a general review of world problems before the International Press Institute.

At the same time Western sources in London said the West will accept Russia's proposal to begin preliminary ambassadorial talks in Moscow — possibly as early as Thursday. But the sources said the West would not commit itself in advance to a summit conference—as Russia insists—regardless of the outcome of the preliminary diplomatic discussions.
