RR SELLS ITS STATIONS

New York —(UPI)— What used be railroad stations along the tracks of the New York Central are now antique shops, supermarkets, liquor stores, public libraries, laundries, lumber yards and even private homes. The railroad decided to start selling the stations two years ago because hardly any rain tickets were being sold at them. Since then, it has found purchasers willing to pay a total of one and a half million dollars for 100 stations. Another 300 are still on the market.

Children normally are farsighted until the age of 8 or 9.
