FUGITIVE MAYOR TELLS HIS STORY

Fled With Only $300 and Became Laborer on Railroad.

ROBBED, DARES NOT TELL

Surrendering After Wandering in Poverty and Sickness, Ex-Mayor Belcher, of Paterson, Relates How Neceus Pursued Him.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Paterson's officials were mercifully disposed yesterday toward ex-Mayor William H. Belcher, who, returning after months of wandering, pulled the massive brass announce on the door of the County Jail early yesterday and said to the jailkeeper: "You know me, Morrison; I want to come in."

He will be arraigned on Friday next to answer to six indictments for embezzlement. The amounts are not disclosed.

Bobbing in his cell last night, Belcher, according to today's Herald, said: "Fugitive With Only $300."

"I did not take $100,000, or anything like that amount. When I left Paterson I had exactly $300. With this I went to Minnesota, and in justice to my wife I want to say that at no time has she known my whereabouts."

"If I had had more money, I would have gone to New York and stayed there. That's the best hiding-place in the world. But a man can't work there and hide, too, and I had to work, so I went West."

"I dropped off in Chicago, but I remained only a week. It was exciting to walk around the streets and pass by policemen who you know were on the lookout for you. I had my mistake shaved off and did not fear capture much."

"Then I made a fatal mistake. I went to Minnesota. I won't say what town I visited, except that St. Paul was one, but I had $200 left, and I hidged around looking for something to do. I lost my wallet one night in the street. I was afraid to go to the police about it, and I was 2000 miles away from my friends, from everybody, penniless and a fugitive. I went to a railroad office and asked for work, but they could not give me any. I was desperate and pleaded for anything."

Dug Trenches at $1.25 a Day. "We can give you a job digging," said the man to whom I applied. I jumped at it. That morning I took my place in a trench with a pick and shovel, and for three horrible weeks I stayed there. I received $1.25 a day. And then they made me assistant foreman, my pay was raised to $2.50 a day and things looked brighter."

"I stayed there until last January, working all the winter in the snow and rain until rheumatism seized me. I managed to save $150, and with it I went to London, Canada. I worked at anything I could get, but my knee was again seized, and I could not hold any position very long. At one time I sold newspapers. But I always kept enough money saved so that I could go back East if I wanted to."

Surrender as Last Resort. "It wasn't until June came that I made up my mind to return. My knee was getting worse and worse and I could hardly hobble around. I could not pay for proper medical treatment, and so I made up my mind to come back."

"I landed in New York on July 26, and the next day I wrote Prosecutor Emley. I told him I was ready to surrender, and that I would return of my own volition."

"Will you plead guilty when you are arraigned on Friday?" he was asked. "What are the specific charges?" was the reply. "Is it theft or what is it?"

"Embezzlement and forgery," he was told. "Forgery?" exclaimed Belcher. "I never committed a forgery. That's a lie. I'll not plead guilty to that."

"It was said that you overconfidently in friends was primarily the cause of the trouble," it was suggested. "Friends, friends," Belcher muttered as if to himself. "I have no friends. I never had any."

THAW WOMEN ARE EXCITED. Mother Sheds Tears and Wife Objects to Leaving Prison.

NEW YORK, July 30.—A report that Mrs. William Thaw, mother of Harry K. Thaw, had suffered a nervous breakdown as a result of her son's refusal to be guided by her advice in arranging for his defense, was set at rest today when Mrs. Thaw went to the prison to see her son.

She appeared in better health than at any time since her return from Europe. The prisoner's wife and his attorneys also called upon him today.

While Mrs. Thaw was still in conference with her son, Mrs. Harry K. Thaw, hurried to the warden's office from Thaw's cell. She was evidently greatly disturbed and asked the warden to make an exception to the prison rules and allow her to use the prison telephone to call up Clifford W. Harridge, Thaw's counsel, and his detective, Roger O'Mara.

She declared that the matter was urgent and the warden consented. Both men responded promptly and had interviews with Thaw at his cell before Mrs. William Thaw left the prison.

When the elder Mrs. Thaw came down to the warden's office, there were traces of tears on her face and she seemed agitated. She did not speak to Mrs. Harry K. Thaw in going through the office.

There was an excited conversation between Roger O'Mara and Mrs. Harry Thaw before they left the Tombs prison today. O'Mara and Mr. Harridge started to leave the prison together, but Mrs. Thaw returned to Mrs. O'Mara and asked her to be notified. "No, I'm going to stay right here," she said, "until the visitors' hour comes this afternoon. I don't want to leave things as they are."

"You must go," said O'Mara. "He took her arm, while she was still protesting, and helped her in. O'Mara said to the driver: 'You take her to the Lorraine, and don't bring her back here again today.'"

It is believed that the excitement at Thaw's cell today was brought about by a letter received by Mrs. Harry K. Thaw, which she took to the cell with her.

APPEAL TO ARMY AND NAVY

RADICALS OF DOUMA ISSUE A FIERCE PROCLAMATION.

Call on Soldiers and Sailors to Resist Government and Curse Those Who Shoot People.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 30.—The full text of the appeal to the army and navy, adopted July 17 by the radical groups of the outlawed Parliament, in conjunction with the committee of the proletarian organizations is as follows:

"Soldiers and Sailors! The government has by imperial command dissolved Parliament and has thereby assembled from all sides to oppress the people by armed force. The people's representatives were elected from among your fathers and brothers, and they sent them to the Emperor the needs of the people and to obtain land and liberty. But the Emperor would not listen to the elect of the people."

He harkened to his former councillors, the Grand Dukes, Ministers, Generals and the wealthiest of the landowners, who did not want to give up their lands and their estates, their gold and silver (amounting to many thousands of rubles) and their irresponsible power.

"Russia is now divided into two parts. One side is the vast majority of the peasants and workmen, all the poor and oppressed, the best educated and the most enlightened citizens; the soldiers who see the most clear light, the students and the martyrs in the jails, including many thousands of soldiers and sailors. On the other side is a collection of oppressors, such as the former nobles and the Manchurian Generals, who ran away from the Japanese but who fired on the people at Moscow and Odessa and Tientsin, the petty government officials, the police spies and the whole Black Hundred, and these rely on your strength to beat down the whole Russian people."

After dwelling on the hard and servile lot of the common soldier, the manifesto continues:

"Soldiers and seamen, we, the legally elected representatives of the peasants and workmen, declare to you that without Parliament the government is illegal. Order which it may now issue have no legal force. We call on you, 'Firstly, to cease to obey the illegal government, and to actively oppose it in conjunction with us and the whole of the poor population. You have taken an oath to defend the fatherland. Stand behind us for land and liberty!'

"Secondly, any man who shoots at the people is a criminal, a traitor and the enemy of the people. We inform him and his name in their fathers and brothers, that they will not be allowed to return to their homes, and that over their names will hang the eternal stigma of traitors."

"Thirdly, the Government entered into negotiations with the Austrian and German Emperors, whose troops are ready to invade our country to defend the government, which oppresses the people, with the power of foreign arms."

"Such negotiations, we declare the government has betrayed the country and is now outside the limits of the law."

"Soldiers and sailors, your sacred duty is to free the Russian people from the treacherous government and defend Parliament. Every man falling in the holy war will earn himself with eternal fame and the Russian people will bless his name. In this struggle with elected representatives defend the government, which oppresses the people, with the power of foreign arms."
