HELSINGFORS, Finland, Aug. 2.-There was no firing at Sveaborg or the islands in the vicinity during the night or this morning, and it is asserted from a reliable source that the mutineers, with the exception of a few on the smaller islands who have a few guns, have surrendered. The prisoners are being landed, guarded by loyal troops. They are dull and seem to have little thought of the punishment which awaits them.

Six civillans, with their hands and feet tied, were sent ashore last night in the midst of a hail of builets. Their identity ls not known, but it is reported they will be shot immediately.

No official report of the casualties is obtainable, but the best authorities say that only 50 men and five officers were killed and 150 men were wounded. The town today has resumed its normal aspect. The Red Guard is keeping out-side.

STORY OF MUTINY AT SVEABORG

Loyalty of Fleet Destroys Hopes and Troops Surrender.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 2 .- A traveler who left Helsingfors at midnight gave the Associated Press a history of the Svenberg mutiny, which was pre-cipitated by trouble over money due to 200 of the sappers and miners. Social Democrat and Social Revolutionary agi-tators who were spreading their propa-ganda among the troops promptly selzed on the occasion to orange a big conon the occasion to organize a big con-spiracy. They told the soldiers that the time had come to put an end to the old regime: that a general strike in Russia had been declared, and that risings of the garrisons at Cronstadt, Sveaborg and Sevastopol would be immediately followed by mutinies of the Baltic and Black Sea flects, and that from the bases thus obthe government could be given its

The soldiers listened to the preachings The soldiers listened to the preachings of the agitators and men belonging to the Socialistic Red Guard were introduced into the fortress from the mainland. On Monday night the soldiers mutinied and made a prisoner of General Aggrief, their commander, selzed the machine guis and the guis in the batteries on three of the islands, and elected a directing committee headed by Zyon, an ex-reserve officer. The mutineers then shot three funity officers and tineers then shot three junior officers and afterward fired from the Emperor's bat-tery upon the residence of the commandant of the fortress. The latter had with him the entire Sveaborg Regiment, which not only replied with the field guns at its disposal, but proved its loyalty by making an attempt to capture the position of the mutineers at the point of the bayonet. This attempt, however, was repulsed with the fire of rapid-fire guns.

Skatudden Revolt Fails.

The next morning the sallors at the sarracks at Skatudden, at the instigation of the Red Guard, Joined the mutiny and holated the red flag. The gurrison of the holated the red flag. The garrison of the city had been reduced to two regiments of infantry and two squadrons of Consacks when the mutiny occurred, and owing to the activity of the revolutionists and the panic in the city it was decided to await reinforcements of troops and machine guns from Villmanstrand. In the meantime, during the day, the fire of the torpedo cruiser Finn made a breach in the walls of the barracks at Skatudden, and at nightfall the majority of the mutineers surrendered. The reof the mutineers surrendered. The re-mainder escaped in boats.

The mutineers at the fortress at intervals during the day fired shrapnel shells from the nine-inch guns at the loyal troops on Commander Island, nearer the shore. The troops manning the island battery were regarded as untrustworthy and were sent to the mainland. The breech blocks of the guns were removed and Cossack pick-ets were left in charge of the fort.

Base Hopes on Fleet's Mutiny.

This was the most serious moment for both sides. While anxiously awaiting the arrival of the Baitic squadron, the mutineers firmly believed that the fight was on their side, and they were also informed that the crews of the warships at Hango had thrown their officers overboard and were on their way to join in the mutiny. Commander Koch, of the Red Guard, had already ordered a general strike and had forn up the railroad. Nevertheless, General Von Saltza, with some of the Frist Finnish Regiment, engaged to get into Helsingfors from Villamstrand. The loyal troops did little firing that day or yesterday. After the blowing up of the magazines, the mutineers used mortars. The mutiny practically ended when the warships Slava and Bogatyr appeared in which Hyland will ge into training This was the most serious me

Laiming, the commander of loyal troops on Commander of loyal troops on Commander Island, fired upon the mutineers. Although the shots went wild, they weakened the spirit of the mutineers, who evidently accepted this display of loyalty on the part of the crews of the ships as sealing their fate.

Two hours later a white flag was run up at one end of the Emperor's battery, but from the other end a red flag appeared, immediately followed by the sound of a fusiliade of rifles behind the parapet, showing that the mutineers were divided into two camps and were fighting among themselves.

into two camps and were lighting among themselves.

Soon after a motor boat, believed to contain the civilian leaders of the mutiny, tried to escape to the mainland. The warships opened fire on the boat, but falled to reach the target. A battery of rapid-fire guns on Nicolat Island had better luck, however, riddling the boat and killing two of its occupants. The others jumped overboard and swam ashore. Of three rowboats which followed the motor boat, one was captured, one was sunk and one escaped.

Occasional shots were heard from the Emperor's battery until the traveler who furnished the above information left Heisingfors at midnight, indicating that the boldest of the mutineers were determined to die rather than surrender, and that they were selling their lives dearly.

the board is Captain Benjamin S. Tulley, commander of the battleship Iowa.

Divers were still at work today examining the hulls of the two battleships, but the extent of the damage is now believed to be practically determined. On heved to be practically determined. On the Illinois four of the six-inch guns on the starboard side forward were dam-aged and a portion of the forward gun-deck was sprung. The starboard shaft was bent and the starboard propeller cracked. The Alabama sustained severe damage to two of her six-inch guns, one of them being bent hadly. A compartof them being bent badly. A compart-ment around a casement on the port side forward is leaking. Both ships will have to go to a navy-yard for repairs.

Ordinary Seaman Corbett, who was injured by the fall of a davit holding one of the boats on the Illinois, was more seriously hurt than was at first reported. One of his legs was amputated on the day following the collision and today it was found necessary to amputate an arm

Sailors Revolt to Aid Sveaborg, but

TUCSON, Ariz., Aug. 2.—(Special.)—
In a desperate battle covering two days Lieutenant-Colonel Jose M. Corona, of the Mexican army, and 266 soldlers executed 69 Yaqui raiders, who had taken up hostilities near Las Guasimas, Sonora.

Twenty Indians and a Mexican sergeant were killed in the first day's battle, after which the Yaquis withdrew to Chihuliete, where on the section of the train steamer. Then without lights they ran a train to the bridge separating the kiland from Fort Constantine, which, with the evident connivance of the sentinels, they had no difficulty in entering. difficulty in entering.

Guns Turned on Loyal Camp. The main body of the fortress artillery in the fort joined the mutineers, and those who did not do so were bound and gasged. The mutineers then turned some of the guns of the fortress against the camp of the loyal troops in the city and opened fire on the latter, with the pre-onnesived intention of covering the escape of the train steamer, which sailed around in a protected position under the guns of the fort.

Until the guns opened fire the whole affair was conducted so quietly that the commander of the fortress had no suspicion of what had happened. Upon the picion of what had happened. Open the first shot a general alarm was sounded, and the entire garrison was called out. While a portion of the loyal troops took up positions in the streets, which were already filled with terror-stricken inhabitants, a storming party consisting of three regiments of grenadiers, the Yen-csei, Silonovsky and Vinlandsky, was formed and led the assault. After four volleys had been fired, the mutineers hoisted the white flag, and those who refused to surrender were hastily dispatched. Meanwhile the waiting steampatched. er sailed off in the direction of the Finnish coast.

No Mercy to Mutineers. Later machine guns were posted in the main streets. No mercy was shown to those suspected of being agitators, and a number of innocent persons are reported to have been killed. This morning when the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholalevich, Commander-in-Chief of all the troops in Commander-in-Chief of all the troops in the St. Petersburg district, was informed of what had transpired, he was furious, and according to information obtained at Aranienbaum, he immediately ordered the mutineers to be tried by court-mar-tial and shot, and it is added that exe-cutions are already in progress.

Summons Came From Sveaborg.

It is stated that the garrisons of Forts Constantine and Alexander at Cronstadt received previous to the mu-ting, the following telegram in cipher from Sveaborg:

"Prepare yourselves to receive a free fleet. We hope to find you friends and not enemies."

A reply was sent in the desired sense and chiefs were chosen from among the sallors, after the latter had ex-pelled their officers. Before seizing the Fort Constantine boat train, the rioters broke into the houses of the officers, killing some of them and arresting the others. The sap-pers and miners and the pioneers han-dled the officers roughly, tearing off their epaulettes and maltreating them.

Artillerymen Refuse to Join.

The majority of the artillerymen of Fort Constantine refused to join the mutineers, thus preventing the latter from getting control of the fort with the exception of one gun.

When the storming party under command of Coloned Sheloff arrived, the mutineers were compelled to rely on their rifles, with which they replied to the volleys of the loyal troops until two field guns and three machine guns had been placed in position and opened fire, when the mutineers threw up their hands.

The number of mutineers is given at 2900, of whom 2300 were sailors.
