PICKERS OF PRUNES ARE FEW

Benton County Growers' Fruit May Rot in the Orchards.

CORVALLIS, Or., Sept. 24.—(Special.)—Troubles are falling thick and fast on prune men in this vicinity. The hoppling has extended to a considerably later date than is usual, and there is a dearth of pickers for the orchards...

The rains have since come on, and from them a two-fold injury results, the bursting of the prunes and the unwillingness of pickers to work. In the big prune orchard north of town, where 5000 bushels should have been picked last week, only 2000 bushels were taken from the trees...

The one hope in the condition is that the rains will let up, in which event help can be secured, as hoppling in the yards here will be ended by Wednesday. In the big orchard, 7 cents per box is being paid for picking. Five cents is the largest figure that ever paid there before.

SEATTLE, Sept. 24.—(Special.)—Collegians who are addicted to the use of tobacco in any form, whether they smoke well-rounded bit cigars, a little curved-stem pipe or the aromatic cigarette, will have to indulge in their pleasure in the woods or off the campus entirely, as a faculty ruling has been passed prohibiting smoking near the buildings of the University of Washington.

When the students came back to register for the Fall term this morning their attention was arrested by a placard waving in the wind above the steps of the administration building announcing that hereafter no smoking would be permitted near any of the college buildings.

Notwithstanding this decree, hundreds of young men went into the building anyway and registered, with an equal or greater number of young women, the entire registration amounting to 500 for the first year. It was only 1:30 for the corresponding period.

Heretofore there was no order against smoking anywhere on the campus and the result was that often after lunch the steps of the main building were crowded with collegians whose heads were surrounded by a halo of smoke, emitted from mouth-bored, the typical college pipe or cigarette. The habit of smoking near the buildings was carried so far that the faculty determined to take action in the matter, with the result that today cigars were thrown away and smoking pipe bowls emptied as soon as the students noticed the conspicuous sign suspended from the porch.
