APPLE SHOW UP TO PREDICTION

HOOD RIVER MAKES BOAST GOOD

Exhibition Was Finest Ever Given and Attendance Largest—List of Prizewinners.

Have you seen Lo-r-r-r-rita, Lo-r-r-r-rita, Lorita now ready, the only dressmaker in the world who sews with her toes. We didn't have time to see Lorita as we were too busy taking in the Seventh Biennial Fruit fair of the Hood River fruit growers. Lorita was no doubt marvelous but the fair was far more so and there was more of it.

No such display of apples we can safely say was ever made anywhere in the world, was the verdict of growers and visitors from all over the United States and some parts of Europe.

Eight hundred boxes of apples so fine that the ordinary man or woman could scarcey detect any difference in them and which caused the judges many hours of worry and study to decide which of them were entitled to the distinction of being labeled the best.

Apples were not the only things at the fair which showed what Hood River soil can do as the dispays of vegetabes, melons, nuts, pears, peaches and many other products gave evidence of its general productiveness.

The fair was scheduled to open at 1:30 Thursday but long before that time visitors commenced to be so numerous that the executive committee decided to commence charging admission. After the morning trains arrived, on which were many of the irrigationists the crowd increased rapidly and the fair was visited by many of the delegates among whom were Judge Lowell, Senator Fulton, W. H. Moore, A. King Wilson, Jefferson Myers, Tom Richardson, of the Portland Commercial club, S. D. Laber, secretary of the Portland Board of Trade, F. W. Metcalf, State Engineer Lewis, J. A. Ackerman, state superintendent of public instruction, F. W. Suttlemeyer, representative to the state legislature, Addison Bennett, editor of the Optimist, Judge Lake, E. N. Smith, Jesse Stearns, Judd Geer and Prof. Kent, of the State Agricultural college. All of the delegates were loud in their appreciation of the apple show and the good it would do Oregon by having its wonders talked about by visitors from the eastern states.

The attendance at the fair the first day was in the neighborhod of 1,000 people and by night all the exhibits were in place. The executive committee appointed the judges in the afternoon selecting J. H. Reed, commissioner of the state board of horticulture, C. F. Lansing, of Salem, a well known nursery man and Prof. Lewis, of the State Agricultural college, who commenced their work of judging the fruit that evening.

There was music at the opening of the afternoon and evening exhibitions and the trains were met and delegates serenaded by the band on their arrival. President Smith, Secretary Thompson and other members of the executive committee were busy looking after the interests of the fair and the entertainment of visitors. Both hotels were full to overflowing and late arrivals had some difficulty in securing accommodations.

The pleasure of visitors which had been somewhat marred by rain on Thursday was insured Friday morning when sunshine and a blue sky greeted them on arising. The first delegation to take in the fair on Friday were a number of passengers from No. 5, which stopped here for breakfast and were invited by J. A. Wilson, vice president of the association, to visit it before the train started. The trains from Portland brought bigger crowds than the day before and in the afternoon a large number came down from The Dalles, Mosier and other points on the road as far away as Pendleton. Congressman-elect Ellis, who had arrived the evening before was also a visitor, and Representative Hendricks was an interested spectator.

During the afternoon the crowd was so dense that it was with difficulty that vsitors could move around and the baby show was the center of attraction. About 20 babies were entered in the contest and the judges had great difficulty in deciding which were entitled to prizes. After considerable deliberation the first prize for children under two years was given to Justine Soesy, with Cora Miller a close second, and Jefferson Pyle was considered the winner for those under one year, with Myron DeBussey as the second choice. After the contest was decided the crowd surged around the building examining the red and yellow fruit and sampling the free cider which was provided by the mill of the Emery company. The cider was evidently very good and harmless as the Glacier man noted several prominent prohibitionists stopping at the stand presided over by two of Hood River's fair maidens, more than once.

Rumors were afloat as to who had taken the prizes, but nobody knew anything definite and it was not until late in the afternoon that the judges made the announcement which was as follows:

SWEEPSTAKES

Best packed five boxes apples (different varieties), commercial pack, Newtowns and Spitzenbergs must be two of the varieties—First prize, cup, A. I. Mason; second prize, M. M. Hill, cup.

The prize for the best manufactured product was won by the Hood River Milling company, which received a medal.

The best display of nursery stock, medal, went to the True to Name nursery, H. S. Galligan, proprietor.

The prize for the best chicken exhibit was won by J. F. Letcher.

The baked food exhibit (bread) was won by Mrs. J. J. Carson, barrel of Cupid flour, Hood River Milling Co.

Pear exhibit—J. L. Carter, medal.

Vegetable exhibit—J. M. Hollowell, medal.

The cup offered by E. H. Shepard for the best packed five boxes of apples was won by J. R. Castner.

Percy Wells and P. E. Wells were mentioned as next to John Castner in the prize for packing apples.

J. H. Robbins received a special prize for the best exhibit of fancy birds (pheasants).

In the vegetable display there were some features that caused spectators much interest. Among them were a hill of potatoes grown by D. L. Davidson, of Willow Flat, which weighed 17 pounds. A squash belonging to Chas. Chandler, that measured four feet from tip to tip, was 12 inches thick and weighed nearly 60 pounds. R. H. Wallace had on exhibition some kaffir corn that was 15 feet high and also some sorghum that was way up in the air. C. R. Bone showed some corn that was twelve feet high and the stalks of which was so heavy that it required considerable effort to lift them. Peter Mohr showed what he could do in the matter of squashes also, and R. H. Martin had some watermelons that would be hard to beat in Georgia. A litter of fine Beagle hound pups made it known that Dr. Brosius was their owner by yelping for a little of the attention that was being given the apples. The Witch Hazel farm displayed all kinds of vegetables and had a fine exhibit.

Rawson & Stanton showed a half box of Newtowns taken from a two year old tree.

A. I. Mason had several plates of freak apples which he called Our Own variety and which were in all conceivable shapes, being single, double and triplets. There were also apples at the show which were perfect and no bigger than marbles and others of which it only took 12 to fill a box. There might have been some bigger but the largest we saw were shown by Noah Bone.

A feature that also attracted much attention was the box of apples that the Portland Commercia club bought for President Roosevelt. The apples are of the Winter Banana variety and were grown by O. L. Vanderbilt, who took a prize on them. They were three tier.

The largest plate display was made by H. C. Batcham, who showed no less than 50 plates all different varieties, which he says does not include all the varieties in his orchard. The attendance at the fair Saturday was fully as large as it was Friday and interest in he show was unabated. On the afternoon train 300 came down from The Dalles to visit the show and the trains from Portland brought a good many from Portland and the Willamette valley. Some even came up on the evening train to take in the show and stayed in the building until they were asked to leave.

Sunday much of the fruit was packed up and several of the exhibits have been taken to Portland, where they will be displayed in store windows.

The exhibit of J. L. Carter will be shown in the window of F. Dresser & Co., and the box of Jonathans that captured the prize will be shown in window of the Eggert shoe store. The Sears & Porter apples were bought by O. L. Vanderbilt and together with his own display were shipped to Portland. The box of prize Spitzenbergs which it was said had been bought by the Hood River Democratic club was among them and has been purchased by a Portland politician who will also send it to President Roosevelt. Many boxes of the other fruit was sold to individual buyers and shipped to friends in the east. Most of the Mosier exhibit was bought by the Davidson fruit company who also bought some of the other displays and the Apple Growers union took the boxes which belonged to them and by Monday evening the great apple show was no more.

Several propositions have been made to leave the exhibition building standing and putting a permanent roof on it. One of them being to provide a place for ranchers to drive into, but this was not considered practicable. Another is to put a floor into it and make a skating rink, for roller skating during the winter. The building will, however, be sold at auction next Saturday as it stands with the exception of the canvas. In it there is about $225 worth of lumber.

Others who had displays at the fair were:

Rock-a-Feld orchard, G. R. Castner—12 boxes, varieties, Newtowns, Arkansas Blacks, Ben Davis.
