The O. A. C. Will Make Seed Tests Free For Farmers

United States Department of Agriculture Bureau of Plant Industry Cooperating with Oregon Agricultural College

Corvallis, Oregon, February 11, 1910

To All Progressive Farmers and Seedmen: Many thousands of dollars are lost annually by both the farmers and the seedmen of the Northwest and Pacific Coast states, thru the purchase and use of inferior seed. This loss is four-fold: First, thru the purchase of seed of a low and poor variety or of seed containing high percentages of worthless or harmful impurities. Second, thru the resultant thin stand and poor crop obtained for the same amount of labor expended as for a good crop. Third, thru the seeding of the land to worthless plants or to noxious weeds. Fourth, thru the loss of busines to seedsmen.

This wide spread and heavy annual loss has been due, partially at least, to the fact that farmers and seedsmen alike have not had the means of easily and accurately determining the germination and purity of the seeds purchased and used.

ATTENTION

The Seed Laboratory of the Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, in Cooperation with the Oregon Agricultral College, has opened a branch seed-testing laboratory at Corvallis Oregon. This laboratory is solely for the use of the residents of the Pacific coast and adjoining states, for testing seeds free of charge. The work of this laboratory will include: (1) The identification of seeds of any kind. (2) The examination of sample for the presence of adulterant and dodder. (3) The testing of seeds for purity. (4) Testing for germination.

EXAMINATION FOR ADULTERANTS OR DODDOR

"This examination requires but little time and will be given precedence over all other work. All samples sent for this purpose will be examined at once and report sent by mail, or on request, by telegraph, at the expense of the receivery."

TESTS FOR PURITY.

"This requires the separation of the sample into three parts (1) Pure seed; (2) Foreign seed; (3) Dirt and chaff; and the determination of the percentage by weight of each of these parts and idectification of the weed seed present.

This test requires considerable time and can be made only by experts. The facilities of the laboratory will permit not more than five such tests to be made for any one firm or individual in any one calendar month. Purity tests will be made and reports sent as prompt as possible and in the order in which the samples were received."

TEST FOR GERMINATION.

"This test is made to determine the percentage of seed which will germinate conditions. The seed on cereals, clovers and many vegetables can be easily tested without use of special apparatus. Some seeds, however, including a number of the grasses, are more difficult to test requiring exact conditions of temperature and moisture, and considerable time.

Samples will be tested for germination in the order in which they are received and not more than ten tests for germination will be made for any one firm or individual in any calendar month."

DIRECTIONS FOR SENDING

1. All samples should be drawn so as to represent accurately the bulk seed from which they are taken.

2. The size of sample shohuld be a tablespoonful of small seeds, such as clovers and grases, and five tablespoonfuls of the larger seeds, such as the grains.

3. All samples should be marked with the name and address of the sender.

4. A letter should accompany sample stating whether the seed is to be tested for purity, for germination, or for both, and the source of the seed.

5. All samples and letters should be addressed to the Seed-Testing Laboratory, Oregon Agricultorl College, Corvallis, Oregon.

All agricultural seeds should be tested before they are purchased, or in any case before they are used—not only small seeds but grains of doubtful quality, as well. Farmers and seedsmen both," are urged to make fullest use of this laboratory, and raise the standard of the seed used upon the farms.

Collaborator in Charge, Agronomist Oregon Experiment Station.

THIS CHAP HAS A POPULISTIC BEARD

The Staples, Minn. Headlight of recent date says: There was an old gentleman in this town this morning who was securely attached to a Rip Van Winkle beard of the astonishing length of nine feet and two inches. Gene Barrus got him over in the New Hotel and gently unwound the beard just to see how long it really was. Gene has been "seeing things" ever since he measured that beard and has barely been able to stay on duty since then. As an outside awning Gene says that set of whiskers would take the prize anywhere on earth.

MAKES MONEY IN SMALL DAIRYING

Experience of a Man at Ashland Can be Easily Duplicated Here

Talk about the high cost of living, dairying in a small way even seems to open up a chance to those who engaged in it to live high, and then make a profit. A few cows and careful attention will make a man independent if one can produce milk and butter and buttermilk as does E. F. Greenman of Ashland, Ore. Mr. Greenman says from four cows, which at present constitute the little herd on his place in the eastern suburbs of Ashland, he sold milk, butter and buttermilk to the aggregate value of $93 during the month of January just past. The feed cost him $33 for the same period, leaving a net return of $60 as a reward for the labor involved in caring for the four cows and their products. Of course, he bought his hay at harvest time when it was $12 per ton and he fed beets and carrots freely which he either grew himself or purchased at reasonable prices.—Ashland Tidings.

FENCE OF ICE ALL WAY ACROSS LAKE

ALTURAS, March 15.—Word was brought to this city a few days ago by L. Stevens who has a farm on the shores of Goose Lake, that there is nearly a foot of ice still covering the surface of the lake. Some time ago there appeared a huge crack in the ice running all the way across the lake. When this crack closed it caused a strip of ice to break off and stand on end. It formed a sort of ice fence all the way across the lake.

MESPOTAMIA WILL BLOSSOM AS ROSE

Desert to be Made Productive As it Was In Biblical Times

WASHINGTON March 14.—The reclamation of Mesopotamia by irrigation, one of the most extensive undertakings of its kind ever attempted is described in a report to the Bureau of Manufactures by Frederick Simpch of San Francisco, now United States Consul at Bagdad, Turkey.

About 12,500,000 acres of land are to be irrigated, the work is to occupy six or seven years. The Turkish Government has submitted figures which estimate the cost of reclamation of the land at $18 an acre, and which fixes the value of the land, when reclaimed, at $165 per acre. Wheat, barley and cotton can be grown upon the land, and the present population of 2,000,000 souls is expected to be greatly increased as the project progresses.

The consul says, "If the land should succeed only in part, it promises to revolutionize commerce and shift trade balances and traffic in this part of the world." Four thousand coolies and the necessary engineers are already at work on the initial projects in Northern Mesopotamia and agricultural benefits are expected to follow in two or three years.
