FLIVVER KING BUYS A BIKE

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Henry Ford, maker of automobiles, buyer of antiques and fiddlin' enthusiast, bought a bicycle here yesterday.

He didn't go to do it, but the heart of a small boy had to be repaired, so Mr. Ford "dug down."

Mrs. Ford, with some friends, left the Ford yacht, Sailia, docked here, to go to Chicago.

An immense crowd was on the dock trying to get a glimpse of the noted Detroiter and his chauffeur was trying to drive carefully. But with all his care, he smashed up a bicycle belonging to little Walter Richardson, one of the spectators.

Walter took his trouble aboard the Sailia and came ashore with the price in his pockets.

not and could not cause intoxication."

William H. Stayton, founder and head of the association against the prohibition amendment, and officials of the anti-saloon league exchanged retorts in statements last night concerning the part George Washington would play in the controversy were he alive now.

The league statement said the first president would scarcely thank the wet organizations opposed to the organization for choosing his national day for their meeting in Washington to boost a new booze rebellion.

Mr. Stayton has asked the attorney general for a ruling whether he may legally read to the conference the George Washington beer recipe, but he had received no answer today. The information that such reading would be unlawful, however, has come from Mr. Wheeler.

McDevitt, but that the man fled. He Johnston, who is in a Council Bluffs hospital with four gun wounds, was done when he feared the officer intended to capture him. Except to admit it, the man had not said why he shot McDevitt, advices stated.

Carter was declared to have admitted that he had intended to rob first fired above McDevitt's head but when that did not halt the runner, he shot to kill.

The first intimation that a "sniper" was active in Omaha came a week ago last Sunday night when the body of McDevitt, a dairyman, was found. Then a student living in that neighborhood said he had been clipped on the lip by an apparently stray shot the week before. The stray shot theory was accepted. Tuesday night, however a .22 calibre bullet shattered the window of a drug store and the police announced a "maniac" was at work.

Thursday morning the body of Dr. Searles was found in his office, a .22 calibre bullet through his head.

The news of that murder spread about the city and people everywhere became apprehensive and some even terrified.

Friday night, Ross Johnston, a special railroad agent at Council Bluffs, was shot from ambush four times and seriously wounded. He said the man fired without uttering a word and fled.

A .22 cartridge was found near the scene of the Johnston shooting and police said it was of the same make found after the McDevitt and Searles shootings.

From the Ground up!

Gill Bros. of Portland, Oregon, who grew up in the market trade, have built up a national reputation for highest quality vegetable seed.

TWENTY-FOUR years ago, Ray W. and Edward E. Gill, two young men who had grown up in the market garden business, were supplying a varied line of vegetables to a route of over 50 grocery stores in Portland. They won a reputation for highest quality produce.

For several years the Gill Brothers grew and developed special strains of sweet corn, cabbage, beans, pumpkins, beets, tomatoes, etc. Their business thrived. A few years later they decided to grow acclimated vegetable seeds not only for their own use but for sale.

The first year these special varieties were described in a small circular. Today the Gill Brothers send out one of the largest catalog issues of any seed house in the Pacific Northwest.

Today, after many years of research and experimentation, they are still growing and developing special strains on their farm, specializing in market-garden seeds and at present supplying over a thousand market gardens up and down the coast.

These men keep in constant personal touch with market gardeners, learn their needs, sense their requirements and render a genuine service to the trade. They are constantly alert, looking for new and better varieties.

Their business has had a phenomenal increase in the past few years. It lives and grows on repeat orders. Success is due in no small measure to the fact that small orders are given the same careful attention as large ones and all are filled with the same high-quality seeds.

Believing that their Northwestern grown, acclimated seed will give splendid satisfaction, and wishing to make permanent connections with all seed users, whether large or small, Gill Brothers will be pleased to receive a trial order from you. Family seed orders will receive the same quality of seed that is sold to market gardeners.

MONTGOMERY BETTER

After suffering with a serious relapse from a major operation performed several weeks ago, from which it was thought he had fully recovered, Ted Montgomery is reported as somewhat better today. On several occasions while in the hospital his condition turned for the worse and it was feared he would not recover. His many friends will be sorry to learn of this last relapse and hope for his speedy recovery.

EASTERN STAR TOMORROW

The regular meeting of the Eastern Star will be held tomorrow evening in the Masonic hall at eight o'clock, according to an announcement made today by the worthy matron, Mrs. H. J. Wortley.
