CUSTOMS OFFICES RUN AT BIG LOSS

Representative Payne to Urge Bill for Consolidation and Reorganization.

YAQUINA AS AN EXAMPLE

Expense of This Office Last Year Was $1040.75, and Not a Cent of Revenue Was Collected by the Government.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Wash-OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAC, Washington, Dec. 16. Representative Payne, of New York, is going to press his bill providing for the consolidation and reorganization of customs collection districts. The bill is one based on absolute merit and is intended to abolish about be customs offices which are being operated at an annual loss of more than $100,000.

The bill will be vigorously fought in the Smite, if it manages to get through the House, for it would abolish about 200 offices that go to make up the quota of Senatorial patronage, and the offices are so widely distributed that nearly every Senator is affected. Some of these every Senator is affected. Some worthy little Collectorships are hardly worthy of notice; others pay fair salaries. They range from $12 per annum to $1000 or $120. The most striking case on the list cited by Mr. Fayne is the Yaquina collection district in Oregon. That office employs two officials, and the gross expense of the office last year-office rent, salaries, light, heat and incidentals aggregated $1,00.75. Not a single cent of customs evenue was collected during the 12 nunths. In other words the Government threw away over $1000 and got no At Beaufort N. C., there were no re-

Y.; Port Jefferson, N. Y., and Vicksburg, Miss., were equally nonproductive of revenue. ost of maintenance ranging from $12

There are a number of other custom offices that are expensive luxuries. For instance, it cost the Government $42.39 to collect $1 at Coos Bay, Or.; $1.50 to collect $1 at Astoria, Or.; $6.57 to collect $1 at Wheeling, W. Va.; $185.88 to collect $1 at Cherrystone, Va.; $185.88 to collect $1 at Annapolis, Md., and so on

is estimated, will cost $19,875,895 in the

The value of submarine mines as element of harbor defense, General Murray mays, has been demonstrated, and he maintains the view that the system adopted by the United States Army is practically perfect as a war weapon. Being under complete electrical control from the shore, he says, a line of mines may be rendered instantly destructive to an enemy or harmless to passing friendly vessels. Therefore, he adds, having so many guns and mortars already mounted in the United States, it is believed that the greatest amount of harbor defense at the least cost can be procured by the completion of the mine defense of all fortified harbors of the United States. 'We cannot afford, however," General Murray further states, "to wait for war before completing our mine defense, but must be prepared beforehand." But even then, he says, a complete equipment would be of no use unless there were a trained personnel to plant the mines, maintain them intact and explode then at the proper instant in action.

The desirability of separation of coast and field artillery, General Murray says, is most pressing. He says:

"The combination of the coast and field artiliery into a corps, as is now done, is not only unsound as a military principle, but the frequent interchange of offiers between these tactically unrelated arms is considered to be clearly detri-mental to the efficiency of both." If a reasonable standard of efficiency, he to be maintained by the artillery will be necessary to provide additional officers and men for the purpose of man-ning the submarine defenses. He con-tends that a regimental organization should be provided for the field artillery, and finally that certain new grader should be provided with appropriate pay connected therewith for expert enlisted men of the coast artillery.

Pointing out that it will require 2278 officers and 55.116 men to provide relief for all the coast defenses constructed and proposed in the United States, at the entrance of the Isthmian Canal and in the insular possessions, General Murray re-marks that under the present system it will be impracticable to furnish equip-Therefore, he says, attention directed to some plan that will supply the outbreak of war the deficiency m the old militia. He thinks that me of the nonexpert class of artillerymen may thus be supplied, as well as a number of second-class expert artillerymen drawn from these forces in the states.

The expense incurred in giving these big dinners (and it was no small item) was a perfectly legitimate ex penditure, but it was too much to rea sonably expect of men drawing $5000 sala What happened to the Oregon and Virginia delegations is happening right along to delegations from other states, and is occurring on a smaller scale with Senators and Representatives having local legislation of less importance It is only just that the Congressional salary should be increased so that the lawmaker can more befittingly meet his social obligations and advance the interests of his constituents.

Cost of Living Grows Higher.

But there are other mod reasons why the Congressional salary should be in House, apartment and hotel rates in Washington are as high as any place in the United States-higher than most places. A Senator or Congressman can not live decently in Washington on a $5000 salary; many are forced to seek abode in boarding-houses and in the less attractive parts of the city, becau they have no other income than thelofficial salary. That should not be.

The Congressional salary ought to be large enough to permit every Senator and every Congressman to uphold his end of the social game, and this cannot be done in a boarding-house or in an unattractive part of town. True, there are always a few thrifty men in Conof their salary; men who care for naught but the dollar, but this element is in a hopeless minority. They are the exception, not the rule. Salary Too Small for Good Man.

Then there is another thing that is not to be overlooked. Five thousand dollars is not a sufficiently large salary to attract a man of any particular ability. A salary double that amount would be more alluring, and while not always the case, would in many instances get a more efficient grade of men in Congress. Fre quently commonplace politicians are sent to Congress, because men of sterling worth cannot afford to come here on a $5000 salary.

True, there are scores of men in Con larger amounts in private business, but there are scores of others, now in the conentity class, who would be displaced if the salary should be increased. A raise in salary is, therefore, in the interest

Some Members Very Wealthy.

Of course there are a number of mer in Congress, particularly in the Senate, who are wealthy, and to whom the Congressional salary is no attraction what Brigadier-General Arthur Murray, chief ever. The deduction is made that clearly more than half the work of coast defense has been completed.

The Congress of defense most including estimates for ammunition and whole year's salary was put into that one function. That, of course, is a rare case, but it is not uncommon among the wealthy element to spend $1000 on a sinterpolar country and to see what terms. a big reception given by his wife to gle night's entertainment.
