Livestock Men See Meat Price Row

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 22 (AP)—The public will rebel at a price boom in beef and pork predicted by some livestock men, says a spokesman for the trade.

George A. Casey, president of the John J. Felin company, one of the nation's largest pork packers, declared prices are high enough and if meat goes too high "the public will rebel." He added "and I rather think there will be strong backing of such a rebellion."

A price increase in pork developed yesterday and some livestock men said it would last for about three months. They attributed it to the small pig crop.
