Wagner Case Opens Today

The case of the State of Oregon vs. Verne L. Wagner, charged with assault, armed with a dangerous weapon, opened at 10 o'clock this morning in Klamath circuit court before Judge Charles H. Combs of Lakeview.

Wagner, a Klamath Falls police officer, was indicted last December by the county grand jury on the charge that he had beaten Robert Lloyd Farris with the butt of his pistol while Farris was in his custody at the city police headquarters. The indictment was returned by the grand jury after an investigation of alleged police brutalities as instructed by Circuit Judge David R. Vandenberg.

The trial date was set for today by Judge Combs after a hearing was held March 6 on a motion by Wagner's attorney, Herbert P. Welch of Lakeview, to quash the indictment. Welch claimed that Judge Vandenberg had used "undue influence and coercion" in his instructions to the grand jury. The motion was denied by Judge Combs.

District Attorney Clarence Humble and Welch were busy this morning questioning prospective jurors. Of the first nine jurors questioned, seven were passed, and two, Harvey Taylor and J. E. Hosking, were excused from the court. Taylor was replaced by Ray Ledbetter, who was passed, and Hosking was replaced by Ralph Hill.

The first nine members of the panel to be passed are, Tom Picard, B. L. Hardenbrook, Ledbetter, G. K. Van Riper, Ben H. Gibson, S. J. Herringshaw, Robert Elliott, Frank Victorine and Hill.

The regular panel was run through in the morning session and court was excused until 2 p. m. when a special venire will be called.
