A chrome panel partly covers the rear quarter panel accentuating the graceful lines of the top. The new Chrysler is now on display at Dimbat Motors, 239 Main.

West Germans Proud of Red Failure

BONN (AP)—"Tourists! Come to West Germany. The door is open. There isn't a single city which has a Communist mayor."

This is probably the only country in the world that advertises the flop of communism as a tourist attraction.

For good measure, it includes free West Berlin, 100 miles behind the Iron Curtain, which divides Germany. West Berlin is advertised as a "bastion of freedom."

The excerpts are from a handsome brochure produced by the Federal Recovery Ministry titled "Das Tor Ist Offen Nach Deutschland (The Door to Germany Is Open)."

The booklet doesn't point the finger at France and Italy, where the Communist parties are strong, but some German political leaders do.

The late Socialist chief Kurt Schumacher, at one of his last press conferences, remarked acidly:

"Why do the occupying powers continue trying to teach Germans democracy? They should do their instructing in France and Italy, where they appear to need it."

The Communist party in Italy claims 2,586,351 members. The Communists have 130 seats and the pro-Communist Socialists 48 seats of 570 in the Chamber of Deputies. The Communists have 68 and the pro-Communist Socialists 41 of the 344 seats in the Italian Senate. The Communists and their Socialist allies have slightly more than one-third of Italian mayors.

In France the Communist party membership is estimated at 550,000 to 600,000. The Reds have 96 members in a 626-member Parliament. They have numerous mayors and city councilmen.

But in West Germany—the target of huge propaganda and infiltration of Red agents from Russian-occupied East Germany—the Communists have only 13 members in the 402 - member federal Parliament.

And these will be tossed out if the federal Constitutional Court rules in favor of the government's suit to outlaw the party as conspiratorial and hostile to democratic order.

Most of the Red legislators may land in court even earlier. Suits alleging slander and conspiracy are piling up against nine of the 13, including Party Chairman Max Reimann. These suits can be tried as soon as Parliament lifts the immunity of the defendants.

For nearly eight years, since war's end, the Kremlin has lusted after West Germany and its industrial Ruhr Valley. It has spent millions of dollars, marks, rubles—often gained by shady black-market deals—for propaganda. It hasn't got anywhere.

For today, despite repeated calls from the East for the overthrow of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's West German government, the Reds can't even stage a sizable demonstration in Bonn. Only occasionally can they push their trained youth squads, lareded with imports from East Germany, into a street brawl in a Ruhr city.
