OKLAHOMA VOTES FOR MODERN IDEAS

Constitution Puts Corporations and Railroads in Strait Waistcoat.

OREGON LAWS BORROWED

Initiative and Referendum and Direct Nomination of Senators-Popular Vote on Prohibition-State May Operate Coal Mines.

GUTHRIEL Okla., March 15 .- The only state constitution to be produced under modern conditions-that intended for the proposed new State of Oklahoma-has finally been drafted here. The constitutional convention finished its work today and adjourned. The constitution will be submitted to the people of the two territories at a special election on August 6. The convention was overwhelmingly Democratic, being composed of 100 Demo-crats and 12 Republicans.

Probably the most important measure killed by the convention was the provis-ion relative to separate coaches for whites and negroes, although the Democrats had been pledged to insert it. Sev-eral delegates alleged on the convention floor that President Roosevelt would re-ject the constitution if the "Jim Crow" osition was adopted and warning le ters were sent delegates by Senators Till-man. Pettus and others.

This little 'jerk water' line was an exclusive ore road, and the owners were experimenting to ascertain the best equipment for handling the Anaconda output. At this time the Union Pacific was putting in some brand-new steel gon-dola hopper cars, which were admirably adapted to this class of traffic on account of their great strength and quick, easy method of unloading. Hill conceived the idea of making a thorough test before the idea of making a thorough test before buying any of the cars for his own use. He arranged to have a string of them taken up on a hill at Butte, and turned ioose down a 15 per cent grade. Part of them were loaded and part empty. The wreck was a success, and so were the cars. They stood the shock so well that Hill ordered 250 of the same type, many of which are still in service. Mrs. Yohlande Degg, who is confined in a county jail in Alabama, sentenced to a 23-year term of imprisonment for manslaughter, has devised numerous ways of beguiling the tedlum of her enforced retirement. The most unique is to have in her cell a private tele-phone, by means of which she can chat with her friends whenever it pleases her. Mrs. Degg has appealed from her sentence, and expects to be liberated soon. Having wealth and political power she has been granted many privileges not ordinarily the lot of pris-oners. Sacred Scarabs From Egypt.

Three American families are the proud possessors of sacred scarabs from Egypt, not the usual kind that any tourist with plethoric pocketbook can buy from the Arabs at the foot of Cheops, but scarabs that at one time adorned the neck of no other than that great potentate, Rameses II, the Pharoah of the Oppression. These acarabs were secured by the late Charles Dudley Warner, who was pres-ent at the opening of the Rameses tomb about 20 years ago when the famous Pharoah mummy was exhumed. He furnished some of the funds for the work, and as his share of the royal spoils took the three scarabs that hung on a cord about the neck of this proud king who had driven the Israelites into so many weary centuries before. The three roughly card below the below of the second secon of these rings he kept, and it is now a treasure valued by his heirs; the sec-ond he gave to Dr. R. B. NBW YORK, March 10.-In response to an inquiry from the Associated Press, William Rockefeller said: "The present astonishing decline in the values of securities is as much a mystery to me as it can be to anyone. I know that public confidence has been disturbed, but I do not think that it should have to me as it can that public confidence has been under but I do not think that it should have been in any such measure as to justify so great a fall in prices. With genuine overwhelming prosperity throughout the country, there certainly seems no ade-quate reason for it.
