NEW LIPSTICK

A luscious, fruitily rich new lipstick shade called "Ripe Orange" is colorist Helena Rubinstein's unique way of saluting summer and all its lively fashion colors!

" 'Ripe Orange'," she says, 'is a vivid, clear orange shade, created especially to flatter the fashionable woman or the effervescent teen-ager who wears all the brilliant yellows, oranges and floral prints so popular this season. It is distinctively beautiful with a tan, too. No matter which is your favorite fashion shade, this light, bright lipstick will provide the accent you must have to center attention on your face."

"Ripe Orange" is equally becoming with the clothes you wear at home, for sports, daytime in town or for a glamorous evening. In a word—versatile.

Clear and sunny, it looks as deliciously appetizing as the fruit after which it is named. And it comes in the famous moisturizing "dew-kissed" texture which protects and softens your lips. This formula releases moisture to your lips every second you wear it and it is also long-lasting, staying in clear, well-defined contour on your mouth without "feathering."

Refresh With MILK!

SPECIAL OFFER currently being made by Stahl-Meyer, Inc., is the combination package of three cans of Stahl-Meyer spread for the price of two. The three-ounce cans of spread are ideal for a base for canapes and buffet snacks as well as making sandwiches. Pictured on top of the cluster-paks of spreads in Stal-Meyer's four-ounce can of hickory smoked Vienna Sausages, the little sausages with brand new flavor.

SANDWICH SPREADS FOR SUMMER SNACKS

A few basic supplies in the larder give the homemakers a more comfortable feeling during the months of casual summer living when there may be extra persons for any meal during the day and the weekend drop-in trade calls for additional snacks.

Stahl-Meyer's spreads in the three-ounce size can are easy to keep in the refrigerator or cooler and the new cluster-pak of three cans makes them easy to buy.

Stahl-Meyer spreads come in five varieties—Liverwurst, Corned Beef, Bacon, Ham and Tongue. Any of the five varieties is excellent used as it comes out of the can for sandwiches or canapes. Or they are all good in combination with chopped hard-cooked eggs for tidbits or mixed with sour cream for a dip for potato chips or raw vegetable spears or chunks.

Try the Bacon spread mixed with chopped hard-cooked eggs or crunchy peanut butter. Spread plain on toast, top with a slice of cheese and a tomato and place under the broiler until the cheese begins to bubble.

The Tongue spread also makes a fine open-face sandwich. Mix with scrambled eggs as you are cooking the eggs (add a little cream so they will be extra moist) and serve over hot toast points. Or spread freshly made toast with Tongue spread and top with a poached egg for a brunch entree.

For your next buffet, try mixing the Corned Beef spread with the yolk mixture for your stuffed egg platter or use for filling for celery stalks. For canapes, mix with chopped swet pickles, grated cheese and catsup. Add chives if you wish.

Mix the Ham spread with finely minced radishes and cream cheese for a canape spread. Spread on buttered toast and top with sliced ripe tomatoes. Or, for welsh rarebit, spread the toast triangles with the Ham spread and top with the cheese mixture.

An assortment of canned spreads are just as important to have on hand as olives, pickles, tomato sauce and the other standbys we all keep in stock. They go with so many things. If you are heating a can of split pea soup, add a tablespoon of the Ham spread for extra flavor, for example. Corned Beef goes with the beef-vegetable soups and so on.

OPEN PROTECTION

Do you line your broiler pan which you are going to cook meat with a sheet of aluminum foil? Do not line oven walls and bottom with aluminum foil because it will offset the carefully balanced reflection but a pan liner will make for less dishwashing and soaking of sticky pans.
