SPRING ATTRACTS THE FISHERMEN

Fishing Tackle Seen in Stores of Country and City When April Comes.

OLDEST OF KNOWN SPORTS

First English Book on Angling Was Printed in 1496-Washington Disciple of Walton, Like Cleveland, His Successor.

BY PREDERIC J. HASKIN.
WASHINGTON, March 22.—(Special Correspondence.)—Bursting buds may herald the coming of Spring to the poet, but Young America looks for the fishing-tackie in the store-window. It is the sure sign. In a sporting-goods establishment in the city the window is filled with fine rods and reels and nets and all that is beauty and expense. In the country store there are hooks and lines, and maybe one or two BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN hooks and lines, and maybe one or two hooks and lines, and maybe one or two jointed rods, while outside the front door, leaning against the house, is a bundle of long bamboo poles. Many an honest angler will get out the old cigar-box, with its lines and hooks, veterans of mighty contests in the deep, and go to the woods, trusting in Providence to provide the sapling that shall make the fightners pole.

Anglers have been arbitrarily divided into two classes—those who use "rods" and those who use "poles." This is very wrong, for if the two shall meet on a riverside, and if they both shall be true to the sport, they shall be comrades in the soul, and no rules of cast shall keen them senerate. of cast shall keep them separate. For a long time the controversy las waged, away from the pools and riffles, whether the country boy with the alder whether the country boy with the alder pole is superior or inferior as a sportsman to the city chap with his fine tackle. Robert B. Roosevelt, an enthusiastic angler, said that the testimony of elderly gentlemen to the contrary notwithstanding, the best tackle meant the best sport, if the angler knew his business. Eugene Field, a confessed "fireside fisherman," champions the pole as against the rod. He ang.

When I invade a pickerel hole
Or seek a trouting brook.
I'll take along an alder pole
And use a limerick hook
Of stylish tackle, fair to see,
Let modarn sportsmen prate,
But leave the modest bob to me,
With angle worms for bait,

And this is without reference to those expert anglers who think fly-casting the beginning and the end of the sport, for in April even the speck-led beauty of the mountain brook will not rise to the lure of a fly, but must be tempted with a big, julcy worm. Fishing begins in April in most of the fair dominion of the United States, and it is in April that everybody wants to go, for then the trout and the black to go, for then the trout and the black bass and the toothsome perch will all bite. Even if there be no fish, there will be air and young leaves and good exercise and a fine appetite. A man comes home a better man, morally and physically. Everybody knows that clongated fish stories are not chargeable against one's morality. Fishing on Sunday.

Is it right to go a fishing on Sunday? here are many men and boys, and some tris who do. In the cities where men and women cannot possibly get away from work and indoors and coal soot at any other time, it isn't looked upon as such a sinful thing to do. But in the rural districts the Sunday fisherman is still tabooed. In a little country town in Missouri there is a fisherman of wide reputal wards of the Potrero Hospital were soon filled with the dead pital were soon filled with the dead Missouri there is a histerman of wide repute named Harvey Merrow. Harvey is a good Methodist and wouldn't think of doing anything against the rules of his church, but on a camping trip which lasts a month there will be Sundays, whether or no. Harvey was restless on a certain Sunday in camp and late in the afternoon was seen to steal away up the river with a Sunday school magazine in his hand. The boys followed him and found him—oh, wicked man—actually fishing.
They hailed him with reproaches and he carefully raised his line. The hook was baited with a page from the Sunday school megazine. Harvey said he was giving the fishes a little spiritual instruc-giving the fishes a little spiritual instruction. He fished away for several hours with his religious balt, and came back to camp disgusted because he "didn't catch nothing but one enery Campbellite."

Angling is the cidest and best of the sports we know today. Bows and arrows aren't in fashion for hunting nowadays, but the fishhook is nearly as old as the arrow. Even the artificial fly designed to tempt the fish to the top of the water is at least as old as the Christian era. A writer in the second century describes the use in Macedonia of "red wool bound about a hook with two cock feathers" as n fly.

Old Books on Angling.

In English literature the first book on fishing now extant is the treatise attribu-ted to Dame Juliana Berners, which was printed in 1996, four years after Columbus discovered the Western World. Doubt has been cast by carping critics upon the authorship of the treatise, just as doubt has been cast upon the authorship of Shakespeare's plays, but all true sports-men love to believe that Dame Juliana Shakespeare's plays, but all true sportsmen love to believe that Dame Juliana Berners, prioress of the numery of Sopwell, near St. Albans, is the mother of anglers, and really wrote the book which we know was printed in 1896. She couldn't spell, Dame Juliana couldn't, but she did know how to fish. In her "treatysee on fysshynge" she tells about the habits of various fish, the kinds of bait that tempt them, the weather that is good for fishermen, and offers much advice about making rods, coloring lines, constructing floats and the like. As she quotes from older books, now lost, to prove her contentions, it may be that in angling, as in the rest of the life on this sphere, there is nothing new under the sun.

Dame Juliana declares that it is best to fish in the morning from 4 to 8 and in the atternoon from 4 to 8 resting at noon-time. To all this anglers will now agree. In our own time we have Grover Cleveland, who writes of fishing and state-craft, and prefers fishing. He said "there can be no doubt that the promise of industrial peace, of contented labor and of healthful moderation in the pursuit of wealth, in this democratic country of qurs, would be infinitely improved if a large share of the time which has been devoted to the concoction of trust and business combinations had been spent in fishing." It was this same Mr. Cleveland who defended the anglers from unkind attacks and demonstrated that a fisherman's word was always as good as gold, even when concerning the fish that got away just before he was landed.

Angling is a true sport. Dame Berners said it was the best of all "disportes," and like other true apports, it has a code of ethics. A true angler will not be wanted to in destruction of fish, he will not need-to-mission to in destruction of fish, he will not need-to-mission.

lessly destroy young fish, and he will not descend to the level of slaying for the sake of slaughter. Thus when he angles for black bass and he catches three or four rock bass he is put out. He isn't fishing for a number of fish, but for the pleasure of the fight with the king of game fishes. If he can catch black bass, the more the merrier. This is a code which binds only the grown-ups and yeterans, of course, for every boy is an angler and to him a fish is a fish, and all fish are good to add to "the string."

Washington Great Fisherman.

Washington Great Fisherman.

George Washington was an enthusiastic angler. "It is of record." said "Sunset" Cox, "that when the Pligrims went to King James for their charter they said they desired to go to the Naw World to worship God and catch fish." Daniel Webster composed his greatest oration knee deep in a trout stream. Henry Van Dyke finds inspiration in a rod and line. Dr. George W. Bethune was our American Walton. These Americans come down in descent from an illustrious line of English anglers: Shakespeare, Sam Johnson, rare Ben Jonson, Spenser, Lamb, Pope, Scott, Burke, Davy and many more.

But greatest of them all is Father Isaak Walton, and next to him his son-in-angling, Charles Cotton. From the modest introduction ending with "I shall stay him no longer than to wish him a rainy evening to read this following discourse; and that (if he be an honest angler) the east wind may never blow when he goes a-fishing," until the close of the book, where the blessing is invoked, "upon all that are lovers of virtue, and dare trust in Providence, and be quiet and go a-angling," there is goodness and sweetness and pure delight in the blessing of Nature for the reader of the "Compleat Angler." It sent Washington Irving to the woods as mad as Don Quirote. No man can read it and stay off the creek.

True Fisherman Born, Not Made.

True Fisherman Born, Not Made.

But there be good fishermen who have never heard of Isaak Walton, and there be lovers of Walton who cannot catch fish. From Dame Juliana down to Grover Cleveland the angling writers have all agreed that the true fisherman is, like a poet, born and not made. Possibly they are right. Possibly one must be born to the art. But there is a time of year when it isn't so. It is April now, and everybody wants to go a-fishing. Let it be perch or bass or lowly catfish, or a mere tiny sunfish—there is ample reward in one fish for a day's tramp. "Nature hath endless aspects; to the angler she doth her beauties and her glories all unfold," said honest Charles Cotton nearly 300 years ago. And the American boy, yearning to discard shoes and stockings, digging balt in the back yard, knows the truth of it as well as the poet knew it, and the poet knew it from on high. "Let's go a-fishing."

FLEES THROUGH REAR DOOR

Four Additional Jurors Secured in Ruef Extortion Case_Judge Defeats Scheme of Ach to Secure Delay.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., April 3.—A.
K. Detwiler, of Toledo, indicted for bribery at San Francisco, was located in a private residence here this afternoon, but escaped arrest by leaving the house by a rear door and was whirled away in an automobile five minutes before the detectives called at the house to effect his arrest

It is thought Detwiler's destination was Belle Isle, 12 miles north of here, where he could catch a Grand Trunk train for Canada.

FOUR JURORS ARE ACCEPTED

Ach's Scheme to Weary Prosecution Defeated by Judge.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—Three of the first talesmen who will sit in the jury-box, subject to peremptory challenge, were passed by the prosecution and the defense as a result of the second dây's proceedings in the trial of Abraham Ruef for extortion. They are: J. H. Dumbrell, a retail merchant; William D. Knight, cashier for a furniture firm, and Julius Meyer, a tobacconist, retired. J. R. Bradstreet having been passed by both sides Meyer, a tobacconist, retired. J. R. Brad-street having been passed by both sides yesterday, four taleamen have now been temperarily selected. When this number has been increased to 12 they will be sub-ject to peremptory challenge, the defense having the right to excuse ten jurors per-emptorily and the prosecution five. In all, seven panel men were examined today, four being challenged for cause and excused—Angelo R. Duperu, a real estate man; William Cohen, a retired merchant; Donald McDonald, a wholesale liquor dealer, and ex-Supervisor John H. Shee-han.

The eighth talesman, Christian Reiss, capitalist, was given permission to address counsel just before the adjournment of court for the day. He stated that he of court for the day. He stated that he was disqualified to serve as a juror because of deafness, and that he was otherwise physically unfit at this time to try a case. In substantiation he produced a physician's certificate. Both the defense and the prosecution paid a high compliment to Mr. Reiss by expressing an earnest desire to have him on the jury "If he thought he could hear the testimony," and the defense offered to accept him without examination as to qualifications.

and the defense offered to accept him without examination as to qualifications. Mr. Relss replied that it would be useless for him to attempt to serve. He was then excused.

Judge Dunne knocked the Ruef scheme of delay to smithereens this morning by ruling that the attorneys for the prisoner shall not have the right to question the class and were asleep in their rooms when the fire started. Before they could be aroused the flames had spread through the building. The walls fell and the inmates were buried in the ruins, 2) being taken out dead and dying.

People from other hotels in the vicinity rushed to the assistance of the buried victims and succeeded in extricating all of them, it is believed, from the flaming timbers. Teams were tracked in the ruin of the restriction of the purpose of his plan, stating that a jury could not be content to court the heavy volumes of newspapers and files and purposed to reward each item printed and then ask the talesmen in turn if such publication intalesmen in turn if such publication in-fluenced him or created bias against the Judge Dunne this morning directed that such questions be not asked, and there is no reason why the jury should not be completed within another week.

This morning Angelo R. Duperu was excused, and all the morning was occupied with the examination of J. H. Dumbrell, next on the list. Duperu was excused on challenge by Ach, who discovered that he had been at one time a member of the Citizens' Alliance. J. R. Bradstreet, who was accepted yesterday, exhibited a marvelous lack of knowledge respecting the issues of the case, declared that he knew none of the people involved, that he had never heard of the alleged extortion from the French restaurant man, and that, in fact, he had never had anything to do with a. French restaurant except on one occasion, when he called to dispose of a mess of fine, fat frogs when they were selling at $1.75 a dozen.

Mr. Langdon's examination of Dumbrell was brief and along lines already indicated. The examination by Mr. Ach, however, was very long. One of Mr. Ach's questions was:

"Do you believe a man has the right to sell his influence in the aid and decired."

"Do you believe a man has the right to sell his influence in the aid and assist-ance of another, if he has influence?" Mr. Johnson objected to this as not a proper question. Ach retorted that it was, "It may be a live issue in this case," he said. The objection was sustained.

Probe Telephone Company.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—Further investigation into the bribery transactions of the Home Telephone Company was begun when the grand jury resumed its session this afternoon. A number of witnesses were called, among them being George Frick and Mark Gerstle, members of the law firm which attended to the company's legal business; F. W. Paton, secretary and treasurer of the Pacific States Company; E. M. Van Lieu, a director of the Empire Construction Company, of Oakland, an allied corporation of the Home Telephone Company; R. M. Hotaling, a former director of the Home, Nicholas Prendergust, "outside man" for the Home. SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.-Further in-
