I didn't have any thirty cents to spend on a kite, when I was a little boy.
There'd be a house going up somewhere, and we'd get the carpenter to give us kite sticks.
Or else we'd get them over at the lumber yard. Hey! Just a minute!
I'm pretty sure I've got some tucked away up here.
After we tacked the sticks together we'd fix string around them. We had real know-how, when I was a little boy.
Did you always make paste out of flour and water, Mr. Wallet, when you were a little boy?
Always.
It's all set. Let's go.
Golly, thanks, Pop.
Have fun!
That's the fourth try, Clovia, and it just won't fly.
Let's give it one more chance.
Heck.
Go ask him how they got 'em off the ground—
"When he was a little boy."
