SAN FRANCISCO, April 18.—(Special.)—The Beavers captured the Commuters at all stages of the game this afternoon, and went out, 5 to 4, though they should have gotten away with the game by a wider margin than that. Kinsella pitched a marvelous ball in every inning save the third and eighth, when the Commuters got to him for four runs. Kinsella was in a tight hole in the latter round, but neither Deveraux nor Hogan could make good with the needed hit, so the chance was tossed away.

Shinn started the game for Portland, with a pass. Lovett sacrificed him. Hogan and Casey brought the run in with a rightfield drive. Oakland came back with two in the third, on a couple of lucky hits, and it looked like a tight game, till the Beavers started for fair during the fourth.

Dunleavy worked Reed for a base on balls and stole. Station hit safely, and then tore in while Station took second on the throw. Moore advanced him with a wallop to center and also piferred. Kinsella at this juncture won the hearts of all the Portland admirers by tearing off one over Higbee's head and sending both men in.

After this round, Reed was chased to the bench and Hogan sent out on the fringe-line. He pitched much better ball than his predecessor. The only time the Beavers got Jerry to his slants was in the fifth, when McCredie doubled to left and arrived on Dunleavy's single.

FORCE WOMAN'S BEDROOM

Elliott and a deputy were obliged to break in the door of Mrs. Belle A. Curtis' bedroom today in order to serve her with a subpoena to appear in Washington, D. TO MAKE YOUR HENS HAPPY KEEP THEM BUSY SCRATCHING

"Make Them Work for Their Food," Says J. W. Bailey, "But Keep Them Warm in Winter if You Want Them to Lay."

A happy hen is a dry hen. Everybody knows that wet makes a hen mad. But not everybody realizes that wet also makes a hen sad. A sad hen lays few or no eggs. She's too miserable. A man or a woman who didn't have a dry roof would be miserable, too. When a lot of hens get wet and gather in a corner under the eaves to keep warm, they're sad. A steam rising from them shows it. They're in a draft. Often they catch what men and women call pneumonia and die. That makes the farmer sad. But all the while he is toasting his shins before a warm stove under a dry roof. They need a roof. They need a roof. They need a little fire. There's lots of wood on the hillside to keep them warm. But it doesn't do much good. Happy hens are not stubborn. They are quite willing to lay eggs when the price is high in December and January. A wet farmer is even more stubborn than a wet hen. She is easy to deal with. And she is not so hard to please.

Keep Them Warm and Dry.

Out toward Estacada many hens have happy homes. Farmers out there are keeping them dry and warm. They are making a great poultry district. This whole country is grand for poultry. The fellows who went into poultry raising on a large scale and came out broke, didn't do the business right. They didn't keep their hens happy nor make them work. Chicks hatched in February and March will lay eggs when next winter's prices are high. That's the way to make money. Incubators will hatch them.

These remarks were called from Mr. Bailey by the poultry articles of Frederick J. Haslin, which have been running in The Oregonian. Mr. Bailey says the lessons in those articles are very wholesome.
