Fifteen Daily Newspapers In Oregon Support Candidacy Of Nixon For President

Fifteen of Oregon's 20 daily newspapers editorially support Richard M. Nixon for president three have endorsed Sen. John F. Kennedy and two have not declared for either candidate, according to a survey conducted by the School of Journalism, University of Oregon.

A heavy majority of the 58 weekly newspapers responding to the school's questionnaire also support Nixon and the Republican ticket generally. Of the 42 weeklies not replying, many do not have editorial pages.

In terms of circulation the pro-Republican leanings of the state's press is even more pronounced, especially in the daily field. The Nixon-supporting dailies have a combined circulation of approximately 488,000, compared to a combined circulation of approximately 35,000 for the three Kennedy-favoring papers. This is a ratio of nearly 14-to-1 in favor of Nixon.

The Nixon edge is much less pronounced among the weekly newspapers, both in numbers of papers and in circulation, said Charles T. Duncan, dean of the journalism school. "Here we find 23 papers having declared for Nixon against nine for Kennedy, but the combined circulations of the two groups are closer than that—approximately 57,000 to 35,000," he said.

The three dailies supporting the Kennedy-Johnson ticket are the Coos Bay World, Medford Mail-Tribune and Pendleton East Oregonian. All three supported Adlai Stevenson in 1956 and 1952, when they were also the only three Oregon dailies supporting the Democratic presidential candidate. In 1948 only the Coos Bay World (then the Times) favored Truman over Dewey.

In the U.S. Senate race, Maurine Neuberger is supported by six daily newspapers, compared to only three for Kennedy. Her Republican rival, Elmo Smith, has the endorsement of 11 dailies and the remaining three have not declared for either candidate. Smith is himself a newspaper publisher—the Albany Democrat-Herald, a daily, and the Blue Mountain Eagle, a weekly in John Day.

Republican candidates for major state offices also have the endorsement of most of the dailies, although four of them favor Monroe Sweetland, Democrat (and also a newspaper publisher—Milwaukie Review, a weekly), over Howard Appling for secretary of state.
