California Power Link Discussion Scheduled

SPOKANE (AP)—The Columbia Interstate Compact Commission, whose agreement on Columbia River Basin waters has been approved by five of seven states, will meet in Seattle Sept. 11.

The group will discuss controversial proposals to link the Pacific Northwest with California through a high voltage transmission network. Glenn H. Larson, chairman of the 41-member commission, said it had been unanimously agreed at previous meetings that the group should study such proposals which effect the power resources of the region.

The commission intends to study the need and justification for such a intertie line, he said, and also consider protective legislation to guard against possible loss of prime power to preferential users in other areas.

A clause long recognized as a law of the land would allow preferential customers in California priority rights to Pacific Northwest power under such a tieup, Larson said. And non-preference customers in the region could lose out and suffer serious shortages when their demands increase.

In "Take It From Kathy," Miss Peterson will call on her varied experiences as a model, TV personality, teacher, journalist, and mother of two teen-aged daughters to write constructive advice in a light vein for teen-agers as well as their parents.

She'll write about all phases of teen-aged life . . . fashion, personal problems, cosmetics, dating, medical news. "After all," says Kathy, "teen-aged problems are as varied as the shapes of their noses. There's one a minute. Some are funny, some are sad, but each is, for the moment, a major crisis."

Oregon Fire Danger Off

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Moderate temperatures and some rain have eased the fire situation in Oregon's forest and rangelands, but Clarence Edgington, regional Forest Service director, says the critical period still is not over.

Cloudy and cooler conditions over parts of the state today were expected to give way to a warming and drying trend later in the week. Easy winds, which usually die out forests and fields, were forecast.

Comparing the fire situation now to that of last year, Edgington said large logging and slash heavy fuels were probably more susceptible to flames. Last year, he said, rains in early August eased fire danger.

Three small fires were extinguished in state-protected lands over the holiday weekend, the state Forestry Department said. All were less than two acres.

Curfew Law Nips Boy

A possible curfew violation jailed a 17-year-old youth early Tuesday morning and police were looking for the youth's 22-year-old companion.

Officer Vernon Jones was on patrol at about 12:30 a.m. when he saw a car parked at Eleventh and Main streets. Jones said he saw a youth in the car drinking from a bottle. As the officer pulled up to the car, the youth got out and ran.

Jones talked to the car driver, who said he didn't know the youth, and then gave chase. He spotted the youth, got out of his car and chased him on foot. He finally caught him at the corner of Twelfth and Main streets.

Meanwhile, Jones said the driver of the car had left the scene in his black 1952 Chevrolet.

Volcano Erupts

LONDON (AP)—A volcano on the Caspian Sea floor about 30 miles from the oil center of Baku erupted violently Monday, spewing rock and mud out of the water and gas flames to a height of 650 feet, Moscow radio reported.
