Embassy Denies Death Story

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Venezuelan Embassy Wednesday denied allegations by the wife of former dictator Marcos Perez Jimenez that he would be executed if a U.S. court in Florida extradited him.

The embassy issued a statement saying: "It is absolutely false and without foundation that Perez Jimenez and his relatives would be executed, because in Venezuela there is no death sentence."

Union Plans New Honors For Fireman

A Southern Pacific Railroad locomotive fireman, who prevented a serious accident when he took over a locomotive in snowplow service from a stricken engineer, will be honored here Friday with his union's international safety award.

Dennis A. Depuy, 35, 4325 Avalon Street, a 10-year veteran engineman on the Southern Pacific, will receive the November Safety Award of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. Depuy's quick action in taking over the locomotive from his engineer, who was fatally stricken, prevented the movement of the locomotive over tracks occupied by other trains.

The award - winning railroader will be lauded at a special luncheon in his honor in the Willard Hotel Friday, Dec. 28, at noon.

S. C. Phillips, Cleveland, assistant president of the 80,000-member rail brotherhood, will present the award which consists of a plaque and $250. He'll be joined by local officials in honoring Depuy.

According to a brotherhood statement, safety awards are presented monthly to deserving locomotive firemen who, through skill, alertness and devotion to duty, prevent or minimize rail accidents. In addition, a yearly award is given one of the 12 monthly recipients selected by a committee of business, public and labor leaders.

The BLF&E safety awards have won the notice of the National Safety Council. The national safety organization awarded the brotherhood a Certificate of Merit for outstanding work in promoting rail safety. Four BLF&E award winners have also received Carnegie Medals For Heroism.

The incident which brought Depuy the November, 1962, award occurred Nov. 25, 1961, in rugged mountain territory. Depuy was the fireman on a locomotive in snowplow service. His engineer was E. D. Bowser. They were preparing to enter a siding where they were to plow snow. Depuy was calling signals to the engineer, which the engineer could not see from his side of the cab.

The locomotive passed over a switch and Depuy realized the locomotive was increasing in speed rather than slowing down. Because of darkness he could not readily see Bowser and got up from his seat to check on him. Depuy found the engineer slumped over the controls with the locomotive gaining speed. He immediately shut off the engine throttle, applied the brakes and stopped the train.

Employes working on the snowplow were unaware of the danger or the drama occurring inside the cab. Later, Depuy said he felt he had only done what any other fireman would have been able to do. He said he was most fearful that employes on the snowplow would be hurt if the plow entered the mainline and became involved in a collision.

Depuy has been honored by the Brotherhood's General Grievance Committee on the Southern Pacific, according to A. B. McNabney of San Francisco, general chairman. McNabney will serve as toastmaster at the luncheon.

Ullman Studies

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rep. A. Ullman, D-Ore., said Wednesday he would support a tax cut if the present economic trend continues.

But Ullman, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he would reach no final decision until further hearings are held by the committee.

The Oregon Democrat said he thought that testimony presented this year before the committee had revealed "a preponderance of evidence" that a tax cut would spur economic growth.

DANGEROUS GASOLINE LEAK — Fire Chief Geno Gheller shows Herald and News reporter George Alotrico the gasoline storage tank at the Shell Oil Company bulk plant on Spring Street that lost about 20,000 gallons Wednesday morning. A pipe under the boardwalk, in background, apparently rotted. The leak has been stopped and two men will stand by with hoses Thursday while firemen attempt to find the faulty pipe. The immediate danger that existed Wednesday has been minimized as most of the leaking gas has been flushed away.

Indian Mum About Gold Despite Jail Sentence

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI)—Joe Suazo, a Santa Clara Indian who presumably knows where $045,000 in gold bullion is hidden on his reservation, was in jail today because he won't tell where.

A man who said he is a grandson of Missouri's notorious bandit Jesse James claims that James told the gold, 1,200 pounds of it in 90-pound ingots, on the Santa Clara Reservation in northern New Mexico after the Civil War.

Jesse L. James, Manitou, Colo., said his grandfather gave him the gold before he died, and told him how to find it. The gold was not loot from robberies, the grandson said, but was collected by James to help finance a hoped-for second rebellion in the South.

James convinced U.S. District Judge Waldo Rogers at Albuquerque that if the gold exists it is legally his.

James said in his suit that on March 10, 1900, he and Suazo located the gold on a mountain on the Santa Clara Reservation, following his grandfather's directions.

But James said he was ill, there was deep snow on the mountain, and he decided not to try to carry the heavy ingots away immediately.

But before he could come back for the gold, James said, Suazo moved it to another hiding place and refused to tell where it was until the "spirits" told him to do so.

Judge Rogers ordered Suazo to surrender the gold to James, without waiting for the spirits' assent. But the Indian, who lives at the Santa Clara Pueblo 25 miles north of Santa Fe, did not comply.

On Dec. 17, Rogers ordered Suazo to appear in court and explain why he had not given up the gold. Suazo did not show up.

U.S. marshals, on Rogers' orders, arrested Suazo at the Santa Clara Pueblo Wednesday and jailed him in Albuquerque. He is being held without bond until Rogers, who is ill, can return to the bench.

Funeral Set For Donelson

Funeral services for Merwin Milton Donelson, a long time resident of Klamath County, will be held Friday, Dec. 28, at 3 p.m. from Ward's Klamath Funeral Home. Final rites with military honors and interment will be in Eternal Hills Memorial Gardens.

He was a native of Duquesne, Penn., born March 21, 1897.

Mr. Donelson died at the family home, 1505 Sargent Avenue, Dec. 25. He had been ill only a few days. Death followed a heart attack.

He came to Oregon from Pennsylvania in 1911 with his mother, brother and a sister to settle on a farm in the Midland District. He was educated in Klamath Falls schools and affiliated with the Klamath Falls Post Office in 1917. At the time of his retirement in 1956 he was a postal clerk.

He served overseas in France with the United States Army during World War I and at the close became a member of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars. He returned to his position in the local post office after he was discharged.

He became a member of the Christian Church during his earlier life.

Survivors include the widow, Mrs. June Donelson, Klamath Falls; one son, Halleck Donelson, Newport, Ore.; a sister, Mrs. Peter Silani, a brother, Charles Donelson, this city; also four grandchildren.

Club Commends Scout Troops

Members of Boy Scout troops 100 and 75 and Cub Pack 75 have been commended by the Lakeville Kiwanis Club for their outstanding help in collecting both toys and cash to aid the Christmas Clearing Bureau this year.

Tom Oden, Vocational Guidance Committee director, and Walt Backa, chairman of the Vocational Guidance program for the club, expressed appreciation for the help given by the public. They report the response this year was "terrific."

More than 400 toys were given by the public, the Cub Pack and Kiwanis members who gave 100 per cent. Money pledges were also generous. Each club member gave a toy or $1. Older scouts made a house to house canvass.

Hospital Plan Chief Slates Klamath Trip

Palmer will meet with the finance and building committees of the board to explain the regulations governing the allocation of Hill-Burton Funds and also how organizations may apply for them.

The director will return to Portland about 4 p.m. Friday, following a busy two-day schedule during which he will inspect the site of the proposed hospital, tour the Hillside and Klamath Valley hospitals, meet with various groups of the Inter-Community Hospital Committee, and conclude his stay with a press conference.

In addition, he will consult with the architects who are preparing plans for the proposed building and is to meet with the Board of Trustees and the Advisory Board 7:30 p.m., Thursday, in the First Presbyterian Church.

Girls Sail For Pacific

SAUSALITO, Calif. (UPI)—Lee Quinn and his all-girl crew set sail for the South Pacific today aboard the 40-foot yacht Neophyte.

Quinn, 33, a former steeplejack turned mariner, hired the girls because, he said, they make better crew members.

"They're more docile, and want to please you; they take orders and they don't cause trouble at sea like some men."

Quinn's crew includes Giselle Mayer, 22, San Francisco, Jackie Miller, 24, Sausalito, an airline stewardess, Susan Bird, 20, an Oakland, Calif., laboratory worker, and Mrs. Karol Hope, 20, a Berkeley, Calif., folk singer.

They were among 71 applicants who answered Quinn's advertisement for an all-girl crew.

Quinn insisted that his wife, Mary Ann, suggested that he "bring along some girls to give me a hand" on his voyage. He will pick up his wife in Hawaii, and she will take over as first mate when the Neophyte continues her voyage to the South Pacific.

The Neophyte sailed out this morning under a good wind.

Each of the girls contributed $50 to the cost of food for the trip, and signed statements releasing Quinn from any liability and from paying the cost of their return trip or any per diem pay.

Train Brushes Man Off Bridge

SPARKS, Nev. (UPI)— James H. Miller today lodged a last minute claim for the title of luckiest man of the year.

Miller and his 9-year-old son went hunting Christmas so that the boy could learn to shoot his new .22 rifle.

The boy was safely across a railroad trestle, but Miller was halfway across when a 22-car Southern Pacific freight roared around the bend.

Miller pressed himself as close as possible to the railing, but he was struck a glancing blow by the engine and hurled to the bank of the Truckee River below.

The engineer stopped the train and found Miller lying on the bank. Total injuries were a few minor cuts.

Miller called his escape from injury a "mighty big Christmas bonus."

Trainmaster Charles Alvard said "he certainly was lucky. There aren't many men who have been hit by 1,200 tons going 50 miles an hour who live."

Central Figure In Death Triangle Tells Story Of Mitchell's Threats

Rosalie Mitchell—central figure in a triangle that brought death to Dmitre Dan Yerkovich last Sept. 28—was summoned to the circuit court of Judge David R. Vandenberg Wednesday afternoon when she related a story of jealousy and threats to the jury which will decide the fate of the other man in that triangle, Herbert Floyd Mitchell.

Mrs. Mitchell testified for nearly two hours in the first degree murder trial of her former husband, remarking first on three conversations she had with the defendant in which the accused vowed to slay Yerkovich, and later commenting on the incidents that occurred at the time of the shooting.

She began her testimony about 2 p.m. and answered questions asked of her by deputy district attorney Sam McKeen with confidence, except for an occasional wavering of her voice.

To queries from McKeen, Mrs. Mitchell disclosed the substance of threats Mitchell allegedly made to her against Yerkovich on various occasions. In addition, the deputy district attorney also sought from the witness her "layman's opinion" as to the general mental condition of the accused.

Mrs. Mitchell appraised, "I would say he is sane," as did three other witnesses who followed her to the stand, including Mrs. Shirley Mitchell, 1939 Riverside Street, sister-in-law of the defendant, and Mr. and Mrs. Clement Stevens, 1510 Pleasant Avenue, who admitted to having associated with Mitchell socially for the past 12 or 14 years.

The efforts by McKeen to establish Mitchell's mental condition was an attempt to weaken the case of the defense, which seeks to prove that Mitchell was not responsible for the alleged slaying by reason of insanity.

Early in the proceedings, McKeen tried to elicit from Mrs. Mitchell the reason she filed for divorce from the defendant during the summer of last year, but the attempt was met with an objection from the defense attorney, who argued that such information was irrelevant to the case. Judge Vandenberg upheld the objection, ruling that the relationship of a married couple is "a sacred part of marriage" and is privileged, regardless of whether or not that information was made public at a divorce hearing.

McKeen then diverted his attention to the subject of the threats Mitchell allegedly made against the life of Yerkovich late last summer.

Rosalie, who had been the wife of the accused for 16 years and is the mother of two children as the result of that union, told of three such instances.

The first threat was made about Aug. 15, following her return from a month's vacation in Tennessee, she testified.

McKeen asked: "What was said in that conversation?"

"He said he was going to kill Dan Yerkovich," Rosalie replied.

"Well, tell us exactly what he said," McKeen asked again.

"He said 'I'm going to kill Dan Yerkovich,'" she answered deliberately.

Rosalie testified that later the same day Mitchell reiterated the threat in the presence of his mother.

The witness remarked that before the shooting Mitchell followed her whenever she was in the company of Yerkovich—whether it be to work, a motion picture, or, "it really didn't matter where," she said.

The final threat against Yerkovich was made about two weeks before the slaying. She and Yerkovich had gone to a local theater and were followed by Mitchell, who sat several rows behind them. After the movie, Mrs. Mitchell said she was confronted by the defendant and was asked to talk with him privately at her home.

Rosalie said she agreed and a short time later the couple had a conversation at her home.

"What was the nature of that conversation?" McKeen queried.

"I was told not to see him (Yerkovich) anymore. If I continued to see him, Herb said he would kill Dan Yerkovich. He said it didn't matter where we were or who we were with, he'd kill him," Rosalie said in a wavering tone.

Approximately one hour before the slaying, Mrs. Mitchell said she observed Mitchell walking up the aisle in the balcony of the Esquire Theater, as she, her 9-year-old daughter, and Yerkovich were watching the motion picture, "Music Man."

Sometime later, the alleged threats made by Mitchell against Yerkovich apparently came to pass.

Mrs. Mitchell was seated next to Yerkovich in the balcony when there occurred at least three reports in her vicinity and an instant later she became aware of Yerkovich slumped against her. She did not see Mitchell discharge his gun into the body of Yerkovich. The theater lights flashed on. Confusion was rampant.

"Do you remember anything else?" McKeen questioned her.

"I'll remember it as long as I live," she concluded.

Mrs. Shirley Mitchell, sister-in-law of Mitchell, added a laconic and ironic bit of testimony to the proceedings. Mrs. Mitchell, operator of a grocery, stated that sometime before the slaying Yerkovich entered the store and told her, "I guess I'd better pay my bill. Herb said he was going to kill me."

Christmas Store Goods 'Sold Out' In Three Days

Shelves and racks of the Christmas Store were swept clear Dec. 21, after three days of operation. A total of 915 children of needy families in the community received new clothing and new toys from donations and funds provided the Inter-Agency Council which sponsors the annual Christmas Bureau and Store.

Nearly 300 families received letters enclosing points for each child, inviting parents to come to the Christmas Store in the Klamath County Health Department and select gifts for the family Christmas.

Volunteers on duty at the store assisted the families to select from stock which included underwear, pajamas, jeans, shirts, sweaters, infant clothes, dresses and shoes. Using funds donated by individuals and organizations of the community, volunteer shoppers found Klamath Falls merchants cooperative in offering discounts up to 50 per cent, and generous in donations of new merchandise to the project.

All local volunteer and tax-supported agencies of the community cooperate on the annual project. A phone service is installed to enable donors and recipients to be matched up and eliminate duplication in giving. The Christmas Bureau also serves to coordinate activities of groups providing food baskets. Stationery and stamps are the only administrative costs of the community project, thus enabling donated funds to be used for direct assistance to the children. Mrs. Betty Cote, county librarian, served as chairman of the project.

Mrs. Virginia Dixon, president of the Inter-Agency Council for 1962, expressed the appreciation of the organization to groups and individuals contributing, volunteers who worked, and all agencies participating.

Police Told Of Vandalism

Three cases of vandalism involving over $70 damage were reported to Klamath Falls police in the past two days.

A large plate glass window at the Long Bell Lumber Co. at Main and Spring streets was broken early Wednesday morning. Police found a heavy gasoline cap just inside the building near the window. The damage was estimated at $60.

A glass window in the door at the Spring Street entrance at the Klamath Auditorium apparently was broken by vandals the same morning. No damage estimates were made.

Larry Johnson, 333 North Twelfth Street, reported that a window on his auto was broken between 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and 7:30 a.m. Wednesday while the vehicle was parked in front of his home. Johnson said he didn't know who could have broken it. He said it would cost about $10 to replace.

Porker Found By State Police

Did you lose a pig on State Highway 66 about ten and one half miles west of Keno Wednesday? If so, you can probably recover your pork chops and bacon by contacting the state police.

The state police found a large pig with a broken back on the highway and had to shoot it. They brought it to a slaughterhouse and had it dressed out to save the meat, however.

The party that lost the pig can claim the meat by calling state police headquarters in Klamath Falls.

Piper Sworn In By Vandenberg

Judge Donald A. W. Piper was sworn in by Circuit Court Judge David R. Vandenberg to serve a six-year term as Klamath County Circuit Court judge during a brief ceremony in the latter's chambers, about 2:15 p.m. Wednesday.

Judge Piper was appointed to his present post by Gov. Mark Hatfield in August 1961, when the case load became too heavy for one judge to handle. In the general election during November, the jurist was unopposed in the race for the circuit court bench and was elected to the six-year term.
