BOWING WITH BARBARA

By BARBARA BAUMGARDNER

Archery can be fun, relaxing, challenging, and interesting, but sometimes tedious and when I think of the tension that those two teams, VFW and Farmers Lumber were under last Wednesday night, I imagine the latter word describes archery for those six people right now. As I perdicted last week, it was a close match. At the half-way point, VFW was ahead by 25 points. But at the final target, the score was 641 for VFW and 632 for Farmers Lumber. So at the half-way mark in this year's archery league, VFW took a loss by 11 points and now four teams are tied for first place. They are VFW, Farmers Lumber, Alta Sports Center, and East Side Electric. They each have six wins and one loss.

Also taking a loss and one that I am very sorry to hear about was Jack Lyons. He was the only archer still in the running for the aluminum arrows to be given for an archer improving his score every week and last week Jack's score dropped. Golly, Jack, I hope I didn't jinx you by putting your name in the paper last week.

But I do have good news. Dale Baxter gets a great deal of pleasure out of keeping things interesting and promoting competition so he has put up that half dozen aluminum arrows for another prize. It will be given to the archer who can outshoot his own high score for the next six weeks of league competition. Here is how it will work:

Check the record book and find the highest score you have shot all season in league shooting. Then for the next six weeks, if you can top that score, that is, shoot a score better than your record high score, you will win that prize. If your high score for the year is 200, you must shoot over 200 for the next six weeks. It is worth a try, isn't it? I know I am going to try!

At this half way mark in the archery league, both team and individual scores are getting close. Five teams have been shooting scores between 640 and 660. As for the individuals, Gordon Lund was high man last week with 238 but beating Bob Jones by only two points. High woman was Audrey Baxter with a 145 and she beat me by only three points and Audrey Lund followed closely with a 132. This kind of competition keeps a person on his toes, doesn't it?

High scratch team was Farmers Lumber with a 604 and high handicap team was Alta Sports Center with a 667. League Standings with wins and losses in that order follows:

VFW, 6, 1; Farmers Lumber 6, 1; Alta Sports Center 6, 1; East Side Electric 6, 1; Signal Oil 5, 2; Kingsley Field 5, 2; Oregon Food 4, 3; Dugan Mest 3, 4; Joes Sporting Goods 3, 4; Sherwoods 3, 4; U.S. National Bank 1, 6; Roberts Hardware 1, 6; Western Auto 1, 6; Klamath Kamera 0, 7.

Schedule for next week finds Monday night, Feb. 4, Alta Sports Center vs. U.S. National Bank, East Side Electric vs. Western Auto, and Dugan Mest vs. Roberts Hardware.

Wednesday, Feb. 6, Kingsley Field vs. Joes Sporting Goods, VFW vs. Oregon Food, Signal Oil vs. Farmers Lumber and Klamath Kamera vs. the Sherwoods.

Bill Nash, new president of Klamath Archers has asked me to pass along this bit of news to you. There will be the regular monthly potluck next Wednesday night at 6:30 at the Ferguson School Gym and immediately after the dinner, there will be a short meeting.

Last Friday night a meeting of the new officers was held at the home of Bill Nash and these officers came up with so many ideas and new plans for activities for the club this next year and they are anxious to share them with you. Personnaly, I hope that some of their enthusiasm rubs off on every club member because this new group of officers has come up with some dandy ideas and they are going to need the support of every club member to make these plans a reality.

Bill says that these ideas won't be put up for a vote Wednesday night, but just explained to the membership so that they can be thinking about them and be prepared for action at the next regular business meeting.

Looks like I've been so gabby that I haven't much room left for explaining our system of indoor shooting as I promised last week but I'll give it a try and try to be brief.

Each archer shoots four arrows at each of seven different positions. Arrows may be wooden, glass or aluminum. No special size or weight of bow is required. Starting position is at 17 yards. Four arrows are shot at an eight-inch target; when the entire line-up has shot the four arrows, they lay down their bows and walk forward to their target, count up their score, write it down, and pull their arrows. Then they all go together to the next shooting positio n and repeat this same procedure.

Each target has a white ring which counts as a bullseye or five points. In this white ring is a black spot but it is only an aiming point and doesn't count extra if hit. Around the white ring is a black ring and if an arrow strikes in this ring, it counts three points. Therefore, all four arrows in the white ring would count 20 and four arrows in the black outside ring would count 12. Often, an archer will land some of the arrows in the black and some in the white so it is necessary to add the threes and fives to arrive at a score for that target. If a line is broken between the black and white rings, the shooter receives the higher score.

Shooting four arrows at the seven positions and using six and eight-inch targets is called a flint-round and has a possible score of 140. Each team shoots two flint-rounds during a league shoot and therefore each archer has a possibility of 240 points. The distances shot are:

1. 17 yards at an eight-inch target.
2. 20 feet at a six-inch target.
3. 20 yards at an eight-inch target.
4. 14 yards at a six - inch target.
5. 15 yards at an eight-inch target.
6. 10 yards at a six-inch target.
7. 1 arrow at 20 yards, 1 arrow at 18 yards, 1 arrow at 16 yards and the last arrow at 14 yards, all at the eight-inch target. This last position is called "the walk-up."

If you have a clear distance of 20 yards in your back yard, you can set up a flint round easily with a couple bales of straw and one six-inch and one eight-inch target. Drive stakes in the ground for your distances and you're all set to go. And you'll have fun.

Three Title Battles Proposed

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —Three world championship bouts on the same card? That's the plan of promoters Cal Eaton and George Parnassus.

The ambitious co - promoters want to match welterweight champion Emile Griffith against Luis Rodriguez; featherweight champ Davey Moore against Sugar Ramos; and Battling Torres against Eddie Perkins for the vacant junior welterweight title.

If everything goes right, Eaton and Parnassus want to hold the sparkling program late in March or early in April either indoors at the 15,000-seat Sports Arena or outdoors at 36,000-seat Dodger Stadium.

But Eaton and Parnassus pointed out that Griffith is boxing Sunday in Copenhagen and Perkins is battling Angel Robinson Garcia in Paris.

"An injury to either Griffith or Perkins, or a loss by the latter would upset our plans," Parnassus said.

Lane Chatter

Editor's Note: This guest column was written by Larry Jones, manager of Lucky Lanes, who recently took part in the National All-Star Bowling Tournament in Kansas City. Herein he describes his feelings about being in the "World Series" of bowling for the first time.

By LARRY JONES

I cannot express my keen disappointment with my final standing in the 1963 All-Star. Nor could I tell you the tremendous feeling of excitement that prevails as you participate in such an event. I think excitement is the right word to describe what you feel when you are bowling with the world's best bowlers. There was no pressure until the last day (none that you are aware of) when you're far behind and then there is always an element of desperation or you just resign yourself to being behind.

I think I felt keenly disappointed not because of my own expectations. I carried the good wishes of many enthusiastic bowling fans from Klamath Falls and all of Southern Oregon. It is for them that I feel greatly disappointed. For me, the disappointment was tempered by the enjoyment of one of the greatest events in bowling. No description can justify it. And the end result of watching it on television is virtually a crime. The cable could not justify it—despite the fact that the format had been adopted as a concession to television.

There was obvious tension on Weber (Dick) and Welu (Billy) as they bowled for the difference of $8,000. But neither bowled as well or as confidently as he had during the rest of the tournament. The television announcer failed to make reference to third through ninth in the standings. They were still on the lanes as he was awarding trophies and cash to the champions. For the people who watched at home, it must have been a disappointment instead of a fitting climax to 10 days of torrid bowling by the best in the nation.

But regardless of the outcome of the one final match shown on TV, the "in person" spectator saw one of the greatest bowling shows in the world. Every day, in every squad, there would be at least four games in each individual game of the series over 250!

Those of us who were non-professional picked M-6 as the squad to watch. It contained the largest number of known professionals, and two past champions, Bill Lillard and Harry Smith. Vince Lucci was in that squad also—and Bill Helsel, who had the tournament's first 1,000 series in it's 22-year history. Bill also had the high game (299). Glenn Allison, Joe Joseph, Clyde Hobbs, Ed Bourdase, Foy Belcher and Ralph Brunt to mention a few.

As it turned out, Frank Evans and I were bowling in what proved to be the toughest squad. Our squad contained the likes of Welu, J. Wilbert Sims, Ray Bluth, Jack Biondolillo, Don Bickford and Fred Lenning to mention a few of the better known professionals. Of the 288 bowlers in the finals of the All-Star, 189 were members of the PBA or had bowled in sanctioned PBA events.

Looking back, it is easy to see what I believe was a key to my failure to score better. That first word is it—looking. I was doing a lot of looking, even when awaiting my turn on the lanes. And it's a well known fact that watching other people's scores will not help your game. It's a difficult thing to avoid when there are so many good bowlers rolling at the same time. And I could not avoid it.

I think I'm able to sort out this one thing in particular because I remember, after doing so badly on the first day, I told myself I had to get my mind on what I was doing. And recalling my practice sessions where I practiced against scores of the professionals in the world tournament, I decided to watch one man. I chose Fred Lenning who was directly on my left. Fred had rolled a 915 on the first day so I set out to beat him on the second day. I succeeded and helped my own lot considerably with an 831 series. The next day Fred was having trouble, bowling very badly, so I switched to Ray Bluth who was on my right. Ray is a study in concentration. And while I did not beat him, I did bowl better on the third day also getting an 809.

Bowling at 8 a.m. on the fourth day I had no set plan and let my mind wander as Welu (about eight lanes from me) rolled a 290. Actually I bowled well except for one game which strangely enough occurred on the same pair of lanes as the game which had wrecked me on the first day, lanes 5-6. On my last day I was so far back I was pressing desperately in the first game and as a result, bowled badly despite what appeared to be good hits.

All in all, it (the 1963 All-Star) was a wonderful experience and I think it would be for you as a fan or as a participant. Remember, there's always next year —and Dallas.

Gene Conley Not Worried About His Broken Finger

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — Everybody, except Gene Conley, is worried about his broken finger.

"These things happen all the time to pro basketball players," Conley said Friday.

The 6-foot, 8-inch Conley, right-handed pitching ace for the Boston Red Sox and center for the New York Knicks, was to fly to New York City today to have the injured index finger examined by Dr. Kazuo Yanagisawa, team physician of the Knicks.

Conley, 32, broke the finger on his pitching hand Wednesday night while playing for the Knicks against Los Angeles in a National Basketball Association game at Boston Garden.

"Right now I'm playing with the Knicks and they are my main concern. So it's only right that I should see their doctor first," he said.

"Naturally I'm concerned, but these things happen all the time to pro basketball players.

"I'm not really going to worry about it. I'll be playing in New York Sunday when we square off against the Lakers," he said.

The finger was swollen and Conley was wearing a pack around it.

Bisons Tied By Providence

By United Press International

Buffalo, which is dominant in the Western Division of the American Hockey League, would probably like to modify Rudyard Kipling's statement to "East is east and west is west and never the twain should meet."

Friday, the Bisons spent another frustrating night against the East, being held to a 1-1 tie by the Providence Reds.

The Bisons, who are leading their own division by 16 points, have fallen into a rut against Quebec, Providence and Hershey, the East's top teams. In the last nine games played against the three Eastern Division contenders, Buffalo has won only one, lost four and tied four.
