Portland, 4.

San Francisco, 3. Did you, see Kit Carson make that japanned catch that scooted off the end of Murphy's bat and started for the land of bleach? Weren't you among those 3300 "put-ups" who braved the wind and the weather to help chee and applaud the hero as he dug himself out from the bugs in the right bleachers? If you were not, you have missed one of the most sensational catches and falls ever made on any diamond since the Pacific Coast League became something. Carson! May the big backstop who is playing first until McCredie can hire the real article, live long, recover his batting eye and think guicker from now on. They say-perhaps it was a grouch who said so-that opportunity knocks only once at each man's kennel. If that's so, then Carson heard the knock, and got aboard opportunity's special. Old Opportunity has some huskles chasing rainbows until they melt to dross in the sky, and they never get hit or catch the dingbat. Not so with Carson. His receivers were working, and when Murphy, in the eighth inning of a nerve-racking, ding-dong affair, lifted a screeching bullet toward the right-land of bleach, Kit switched on central, threw the throttle wide open, put on the blower and set sail for the foul.

Along the right field there is a threefoot drop from the field to where the first row of bleachers begins. Carson knew the drop was there, but old man Opportunity was hustling him along. He was tagged for a sensation, and he pulled it. Murphy's foul came out of he raindrops on the wooden edge of he field. Carson clutched it and then fell headlong into a cluster of bleach-erites. He hurt his arm, but held the hall. Great for Carson. And what a noise those 3300 people made! Car-son's retreat to the bench was one con-

Story of the Game.

According to the official score, there were 814 innings played. To the batty fan who insists upon having bifflets and runs in every inning, there were only 1½ innings of the crank satisfier. Captain Mohler sent Hoag out to take the pelts of the Beavers, but Manager Mac had an ace in the hole—he put the elongated Kinsella on the mound to defend us. It was a wise move, for Kinsella was filled with a fine assortment of fine out-curves that the Seals couldn't feed upon to profit. The big twirler made the Seals feel as unhappy as a Cinderella with corns. He was there also with the big horseshoe, for several times, with the nifty work of Pat Donahue, he sneaked out of deathtraps that made the fans groan. of the invading artillerists from the Southland fanned the weeping ozone, and among the lot was Captain Mohler, who has been hitting 'em like a fiend all week. The five singles made off him left a scar, for three of them were bouqueted in the opening salute. These three bingles and a pass gave the Seals their three runs. After that It was curtains for the visitors.

If Kinsella was as stingy as a n with his hits, Hoag had all of the ing misers-and the dead, too, for that matter—tied in a true lovers' knot. He allowed the home talent only two mange-caten bifficts. Manager Mac got one over third base that was as sweet as 'lasses and co'n pone, for it was the poke that won the battle.

When Hoag took the mound he was suddenly afflicted with Joyetus, Irwin took care of Shinn's rainmaker. Some one pulled out the safety-plug, and Hoag began giving passes with crimi-nal abandon. Catcher Street had a brainstorm and he cussed the Ump un-til he was blue. Captain Mohler saw the balloon go up and tried to capture it by hypnotic suggestion, while Wheel-er and Hildebrand said their prayers backward, but Hoag's arms were deaf and dumb. He walked Lovett. Casey was safe when Nick Williams failed to hold the murding missile. McCredie walked. Gum woke the slumbering bleschers and while the noise was going on, Hong was feeding wide ones to Lovett got familiar with the pan. Then Bassey walked, and collected his prom-issory note. Donahue flew to Pa Irissory note. Donahue flew to Pa Ir-win and Kinsella fouled out to Street.

Beavers Clinch Game in Second.

This left the Scals still one in the lead, but they were slain in one, two, three order and were through, but when the Beavers' turn came they made use of the golden opportunity. Shinn was safe on a fumble by Wil-liams. So was Lovett on one by Hoag. Batteries—White and W. Casey lammed one to right that Mur-phy grabbed, but both Shinn and Lovett had time to advance. Then ar-rived Manager Mac with his biff over third, and the game was won. Several times during the melee there were breath-holding spasms, for the Seals were contesting every inch of the way. They had the tying and the winning run knocking at the door several times, but falled to nut them over Core also but failed to put them over. Once also the Beavers made the fans say unkind

In the fifth, Casey walked. Mc-Credie went out and on Mott's single Casey went to third, and on the throw back, Mott took second. Bassey came up and someone singled for a hit and run. Bassey pasted the ball to right field for an out, and Casey just did have time to get in the clear. But for the signal, Casey could have easily scored. As it was, there were two down and Donahue failed to get the ball out of the lot. For a time it Imperial Hotel-Also Kodak Developi

A glance at the batting averages of the Portland and San Francisco teams, made for the week just passed, shows the players who are hitting the ball. The Seals have a team average of .253 per cent, and the Beavers .232. But one of the Beavers leads the whole bunch.

Frank Gum is there at the head of the column with 1855 per cent. Gum was at bat only three times in the series, yet he managed to hit safely two times.

In the regular batters, Kid Mohler leads, with a percentage of 403. Right after him is Mott, the Beavers' crack third baseman. The local man is holding his own when it comes to hitting the sphere, and has shown up remark-ably in the past series. If he is able to keep up at this rate he will be one of McCredie's most valuable men. The standings are as follows:
