MORE COLOR

NEW YORK (UPI)—It seems that White no longer is the fashion in appliances.

According to National Furniture Review magazine, some manufacturers are selling about 33 per cent of their refrigerators and 20 per cent of their ranges, washers and dryers in color. The most popular are yellow and copper.

Quartet Of Warriors Needs Marriage Advice

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My eyes almost popped out when I saw your advice to the girl who was weeping because she had a shape like an ironing board. The poor girl said she'd be happy if she could fill even a 32 bra. You told her if measurements were that important to go to a lingerie shop and treat herself to a padded 36.

You must be nuts. What in the world would her friends say? Here this dame has been built like a flagpole all her life and suddenly she turns up looking like a Miss America.

Honestly, Ann, I think you're getting too old for the job. Why don't you turn in your typewriter for a rocking chair? — SURPRISED AT YOU

Dear Surprised At Me: Whether the girl is built like a Greek goddess or a 10-year-old boy is not important. What "her friends" say is equally unimportant. What is important is how the girl feels about it.

Any girl who is in a state of depression because of her measurements should do something about it. If this ridiculous thing means so much to her I say go ahead and buy some happiness.

Dear Ann Landers: We have two sons, 24 and 26 years of age. We have never been rich people, Ann, but we always managed to see that our boys had everything the well-to-do boys in their crowd had. We thought it would make them happy and well adjusted.

Something must have gone wrong because at this moment their wives are both living with us and the boys are living in a hotel. This has happened before. Whenever our sons have a tiff with their wives they dump them on us because we have a big house and the girls like my cooking.

Both of these girls have mothers of their own and one lives right in town but they never go home, they always come here. My husband says, "Isn't it wonderful that our sons' wives feel so friendly toward us?"

I would gladly forego the compliment if they would settle their domestic problems and stay home. What should I do now?—TIRED

Dear Tired: You've always pulled chestnuts out of the fire for your sons and they expect it.

The best favor you can do this quartet of warriors is to insist that they take their troubles to a marriage counselor or a clergyman and get their marriages back on the track. So long as you are willing to run open house for fighting couples you'll have roomers and boarders forever.

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice to "Weighing and Measuring" was right on the button. The mother wrote that her daughter had sent for your booklet, "Necking and Petting" and admitted she had benefited from it. The mother then asked if it would be advisable to send for the "Teenagers and Smoking" booklet and "leave it around where the girl could see it." You told her no—that unwanted advice was useless and unless the girl sent for the booklet herself she would probably ignore the advice.

How I wish my mother had had the benefit of your counsel. It has taken me nearly five years to straighten myself out. For years I rebelled against my mother's authority, and I was in deep trouble with myself because of it. As you know this is the worst trouble of all.

Few people understand how too much authority can warp adolescent thinking. Please tell them again that the parent who is too domineering and too strict can do just as much damage as the parent who exercises no authority at all.—STILL RECOVERING

Dear Still: I will keep telling them, and thank you for adding your voice to mine.

To learn the knack of feeling comfortable with the opposite sex, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Be Date Bait," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Science, Mathematics Teachers To Attend University Session

Thirty nine elementary school teachers from throughout the U.S. have been selected to participate in an eight-week summer institute in earth science and mathematics at the University of Oregon.

The institute, which will be held from June 17 to Aug. 9, will be under the direction of James C. Stovall, associate professor of geology.

The National Science Foundation has awarded the university a grant of $43,500 in support of the program. The grant will provide for operating expenses and stipends of $75 each for the participants, plus travel and dependency allowances.

New Teacher

BLY—Mrs. Stella Olson, who has taught the fourth and fifth grades at the Bly School for the past six years, has accepted a teaching position at the Fairhaven School in Stewart-Lenox.

Mrs. Olson has been teaching for 11 years and will receive her bachelors degree from Southern Oregon College this summer. She also attended the State Teacher's College in Minot, N.D., in 1960; the Black Hills Teachers College in Spear Fish, S.D., in 1961; Bemidji State College in Bemidji, Minn., in 1962, and has been taking night school courses for the last five years.

Mrs. Olson's hometown is Souris, N.D. She is married to Otto Olson and has three children, Sheldon Harrison of Santa Maria, Calif.; Mrs. Cliff Patterson of Souris, N.D., and Mrs. Robert Rose of Klamath Falls.

Dr. Luther S. Cressman, head of the anthropology department at the University of Oregon, has been the recipient of a series of honors from faculty and students during the past week.

Dr. Cressman will retire at the end of this month. The leading Northwest archaeologist has been a member of the university faculty since 1929 and head of the department since 1935.

Dr. Cressman's present and former graduate students have established the L. S. Cressman Fund for short-term emergency loans to anthropology majors. Announcement of the fund was made last week during a coffee hour honoring Dr. and Mrs. Cressman in the Alumni Room of Gerlinger Hall.
