WALL STREET

NEW YORK (UPI) — A last minute burst of selling managed to chip away all the market's early gain today, leaving the list lower.

Chrysler weakened in a mixed motor group despite news that auto production this week is scheduled 10.5 per cent ahead of last year.

Du Pont weakened in the chemicals. Steels were nerrowly mixed. Some electronics moved down from their highs. Loral improved after receiving $3.7 million in new Army contracts.

Some metals, drugs and sugar stocks moved higher. Polaroid and Xerox rose around 4 and 2, respectively.

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Goodbody & Co. says that both the equity and money market may now be well prepared for an increase in the federal reserve discount rate, which has been widely rumored in recent weeks.

"An increase to anything less than 3½ per cent from the present 3 per cent would probably be anticlimactic. However, such action is not likely to put a damper on business activity, particularly if it comes during the present seasonal lull in the demand for loans. Rather, an increase in the discount rate would relate more to our international balance-of-payments position and improve the attractiveness of the U.S. money market in world capital movements," Goodbody said.

Standard & Poor's recommends maintaining a cautious attitude toward the near-term outlook for the stock market based on the belief that recent firming of prices may prove technical in nature. Standard says it is best to hold some reserves. "Strictly long-term investment positions need not be disturbed."

United Business Service believes the market is on solid footing because of good business, ample credit and the absence of speculation or large public participation.

Jury Gets Ochiho Murder Case; Judge Denies Acquittal Motion

The Zelma Ochiho murder case went to the jury early Thursday afternoon.

Both the prosecution and the defense attorneys wound up their final arguments just prior to noon Thursday, and the judge's final instructions preceded jury deliberation.

In closing arguments, the prosecution hammered at the fact that the defense had not called witnesses who could have corroborated the accidental shooting plea relied upon by Mrs. Zelma Ochiho, known to her friends as "Turkey Feathers."

The prosecution made sharp reference to Mrs. Ochiho being the only witness for the defense, to her demeanor while on the stands such as laughing, joking and bragging about being a good drinker, and to her creditability as a witness.

He referred repeatedly to two pieces of evidence which contradicted the accidental shooting plea. These were the finding of a cartridge casing outside the front door of the house that was traced to the rifle used in the slaying, and the discrepancy in Mrs. Ochiho's statement about seeing through the door into the living room when Mrs. Eddie Dailey testified you could not see through the door, that it contained a mirror in place of a glass pane.

The defense scoffed at the state's case, termed attempts to prove a love triangle as the cause of the killing as "baloney and innuendo," cited contradictory statements by witnesses presented by the state and told the jury that the state itself had corroborated the testimony of Mrs. Ochiho.

Circuit Judge Donald Piper opened the Thursday proceedings by denying several previous motions by the defense, one for a directed verdict of acquital and another for striking first and second degree murder from subsequent instructions to the jury.

Details on the cartridge casing were brought out in the Tuesday presentation of the case.

The second contradictory piece of evidence was introduced as the last act of the trial proceedings on Wednesday.

After a 30-minute recess to enable the state to secure an additional witness, Mrs. Mabel Dailey, wife of Eddie Dailey who owned the house on Commerical Street, took the stand.

During Mrs. Ochiho's testimony, the accused woman stated that she had entered the outside screen door of the house, and had looked through the window of the living room door before knocking and entering the house proper.

She told the jury she had looked through the window of the door and saw "Eddie Dailey in the kitchen."

However, Mrs. Dailey testified that there was no window in the door, but rather a mirror which she had put there.

She told the court that she had put the mirror on the door with wooden strips. The defense brought out the fact that she was in California the night of the shooting.

Attorney for the defense argued, "You didn't know, then, the condition of the door the night of the shooting?"

While she admitted this was true, she testified that the mirror was still on the door when she returned.

The issue was vital to the case since Mrs. Ochiho has maintained that she opened the door with her left hand while carrying a rifle in her right and that she then closed the door with her right hand and that in this process the rifle fired the fatal shot that killed Mrs. Huitt.

Under hammering questions by the prosecution Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Ochiho admitted on the stand that she had used at least 10 other names besides Mrs. Ochiho at various times, that she had been convicted of crimes by the state including drunken driving and drunk on a public highway, that she had purchased bootleg liquor on at least two occasions and that she had aided Mrs. Huitt in securing drinking money from her trust officer by lying to him that they needed the money to turn on the utilities at a house owned by Mrs. Ochiho.

She also admitted under questioning that she had asked Otis Washington to drive her to California (Alturas) on several occasions. Once it was to have been a trip with her ex-husband, and once alone.

She also agreed that Mrs. Huitt did not know that she was planning to go to San Francisco and have Washington drive her down until Mrs. Ochiho informed her of that sometime on the afternoon of the day in which the shooting took place.

Shortly after, she testified, Mrs. Huitt asked if she could go along, and she said that it was agreed that she would go and that the two would then go on to Hawaii.

Mrs. Ochiho said she remembered nothing between the time that the shot was fired and the gun was taken away from her by both Washington and Eddie Dailey.

However, the prosecution, despite repeated objections from the defense, all of which were overruled, went back through the final stages of the shooting and pointed out how clearly Mrs. Ochiho could remember getting out of her car at the Commerical Street address, putting on her coat, unloading the rifle, putting the shells in her pocket, going into the house, rapping on the door, opening the door with her left hand, closing the door with her right as the gun fired, but could not recall anything from that moment until the gun was taken from her.

"It was only a split second before they both jumped me," she replied. The prosecution pointed out that Dailey had been in the kitchen and Washington sitting on the divan next to Mrs. Huitt, and that it would have taken several seconds for them to get to Mrs. Ochiho.

The prosecution also hammered the fact that she did not inquire whether the shot had hit anyone, but only asked that they give her rifle back.

As the testimony of the trial closed with Mrs. Dailey's stand appearance, the defense made two motions, one for a directed verdict of acquittal, and failing that, asked that first and second degree murder be withdrawn from consideration of the jury.

The motions were argued and Judge Piper took them under advisement as the day ended.

Death Takes R. J. Snapp

Robert James Snapp Jr., 65, of Aiken, S.C., died following a heart attack as he was being brought by ambulance to Klamath Falls from Crater Lake. He was stricken about 7:50 a.m. Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Snapp and a son, Robert, of Seattle, whom they had been visiting were at Crater Lake when Mr. Snapp became ill.

He was taken by U.S. Forest Service ambulance and was transferred to Peace Ambulance for the remainder of the trip to Hillside Hospital. He was dead on arrival.

Ward's Klamath Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements to ship the body east. Services will be in McGaheysville, Va.

31 Battle Hog Back Blaze

A total of 31 fire-fighters fought over three hours to contain a 30-acre grass fire that raced rapidly up Hog Back as it was fanned by winds Tuesday at 2 p.m.

The fire was stopped at the fire-break on the east of Hog Back as firemen from OTI reached the fire-break at the same time the fire did.

Paul Nichols, KFPA, said if the fire was not cut off at the break it would have been very difficult to handle. Nichols said it was the first time in a number of years that fire crews were able to stop Hog Back grass fires at the break. Fire units responding to the call included KFPA, the county and suburban fire departments, OTI, and the county fire warden.

Also assisting in water drops was an old Navy TBM torpedo aircraft owned by the Klamath Aircraft and piloted by Richard Hardy.

The grazing land consumed by the flames was owned by the Cunningham, Campbell Ranch. The fire was first discovered by Mrs. Paul Nichols, 4837 Onyx Street.

It was presumed that the blaze was started by a group of youths hiking along the hill.

NEED FOR KLAMATH CLEAN-UP — County Health Officer Dr. Seth Kerron and county sanitarians, Willard Ostlund and William Borland, made an inspection tour of some of the alleys in the downtown area Tuesday in conjunction with National Clean-Up Week, supposedly being observed in Klamath Falls this week, and found the alleys "in deplorable condition." The same condition with garbage strewn in the alleys and stench from unwashed garbage cans was also evident in the suburban area, the health officials said. Merchants and private citizens are urged to clean up and take advantage of the free dump day at the city dump Friday, July 13.

Festival Booklet Ready

ASHLAND — Synopses of this season's four Oregon Shakespearean Festival productions are now available through the Festival's Tudor Guild auxiliary. The series of booklets offers the stories of the 1963 productions of "Merry Wives of Windsor," "Romeo and Juliet," "Love's Labour's Lost," and "Henry the Fifth."

Presented in entertaining narrative form, the series is published through the courtesy of author Marchette Chute and Harcourt, Brace, and World, Inc.

The pamphlets are priced at 25 cents each plus five cents each for postage. They may be purchased by writing "Tudor Guild Gifts," P.O. Box 463, Ashland, Ore.

All proceeds from the sale of the synopses directly benefit the Tudor Guild's scholarship fund for Oregon Shakespearean Festival actors.

Idea Given

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — The fewer the clothes the better work an automatic washer does. That's the opinion of manufacturers and Helen Bell, extension home management specialist at Penn State.

Miss Bell said researchers found washing is more effective with loads two to three pounds lighter than recommended. She said the smaller load gives clothes more chance to move about freely and create more friction.

Cowboy, 17, First Entry In Rodeo

A Palo Cedro, Calif., boy is the first to officially enter competition in the ninth annual Basin Junior Rodeo to be staged July 20-21 at the Klamath County Farigrounds.

Allen Jones, 17, of that city, will enter the bareback competition, steer riding, one-fourth and one-eighth mile races and the cutting horse contest.

His application was received this week by Juanita Stoehsler, secretary of the Basin Junior Rodeo.

There will be a performance each day starting at 12:30 p.m. for the cutting horse event. The grand entry will be at 1 p.m.

Boys and girls from 8 to 18 are eligible to register. Blanks are at Charlie Read's Saddlery, Freeman's Saddlery, Albers Feed Store, Drews' Manstore and the East Main Shoe Shop. All entries and fees must be in the rodeo office not later than July 16.

Events in the senior division include saddle bronc riding, bareback bronc, steer riding for boys and girls, tie-down calf roping, team roping, girls' barrel race, quartermile race, one-eighth mile race, pony express race and cutting horse contest.

Juniors may enter calf riding for boys and girls, break-a-way calf roping, barrel racing, quarter-mile race, one-eighth mile race, Shetland race, cutting horse contest.

There will be a special family team roping contest for either parent and son or daughter.

All-around senior and junior cowhands will each receive a saddle. The all-around cowgirl will win a trophy and buckles will go to the winners of average in each event. A $300 added purse is up for prize money.

Address all entries and communications to Rte. 1, Box 618, Klamath Falls.
