OREGON GIRLS DO NOT LIKE CHICAGO

Say Weather is Vile and the Streets "Awfully" Dark and Dismal.

CRITICISE EASTERN MEN

Frankness of Coast Lassies Takes Away Breath of Artificial New Yorkers-Disappointed in Metropolls and Jamestown Fair.

CHICAGO, June 4.-(Special.)-This wicked old city threw up its hands today, nd is waiting to see what the verdic will be. Seventeen resy-sheeked, brighteyed, but remorseless critics from Oregon mrived and imediately began passing judgment upon the town. They will abide here three days, during which Chieago will be on its best behavior.

Well may Chicago tremble at the verdict of these blushing representatives of Oregon. The joit they handed "Little Old New York" has caused that town to apply court plaster to its egomania. The Jamestown Exposition came in for a share of their discomforting frankness.
And the girls became sardonic the moment they stepped out of the rallway

Among the young women in the party are Misses Edyth Robinson, Stella O. Campbell, Pansy Speciman, Ada Metcalf, Helen Swain, Audrey Woolrey, Dolly Hetty, Bianche Langley, Grace McCoskey, Dalsy Betterly, Gladys V. Shaw, Mamie Smith and Ellen Harrison. The chaperon is Mrs. C. E. Redfield.

Not Pleased With Weather.

"Isn't the weather awful?" was doleful remark which escaped from morry lips of the young women as they chattered over their luggage atrangements on arrival at the Sherman House. "But then we sort of expected tt," was a statement that made plain how our elimatic reputation is racing for honors with the glory of our hog output and climatic reputation is racing for honors with the glory of our hog output and railway mileage. "You see, we've heard a lot about Chicago weather, and we are not at all surprised to find such unsettled conditions. Aren't your streets awfully dark and dismal? I don't believe I ever saw such black-looking rows of build-tons."

So much for the first thud,
"New York certainly is dirty," said Miss Hefty, "the streets are terrible. And you can tell a Western man in New

'Yes, the New York men are the rudest I ever have seen," interjected Miss Met-calf. "In the streetcar the men bury their heads in the papers and let the women stand up. You never see that in

"And Broadway!" exclaimed Miss Lang-"And Broadway!" exclaimed Miss Lang-ley. "I heard so much about the Great White Way and I expected to see some-thing dazzling. I can't understand how a great big city like New York could have so many disky little shops and rickety two-story buildings."

"What impresses me most in the East." said Miss Metcail, "Is the artificiality of the worsen. Why they all ampeared the women. Why, they all appeared amazed at me whenever I expressed a frank opinion. Gracious, I'd hate to be so afraid of myself. All the girls said they were disappointed at the Jamestown Exposition, but that Washington equaled all their hopes.

ALL GIVE LEISHMAN THANKS

American Missionaries in Turkey

Grateful for Privileges. SALONICA, May 20.—(Correspondence of Associated Press.)—The annual meet-ing of the European Turkey Mission in session at Monastir, Turkey, May 9, session at Monastir, Turkey, May 3, passed the following resolutions:

"We, the members of the European Turkey Mission, assembled in annual meeting at Monastir, are gladdened by a letter from Treasurer W. W. Peet, at Constantinople, announcing that an imperial Irade has been signed granting to Amer-can institutions in Turkey the same privi-leges which were given to the institutions of France and other European powers six years ago.

"While recognizing that with more energetic backing from the home government, the result might have been attained more speedily, we would express our appreciation of the patience and persistence with which Ambassador John G. A. Leishman has striven to secure it, and we heartly congratulate him and our-selves on the success which has crowned his efforts.

'We also congratulate Mr. Leishman on his triumph in getting our legation elevated to the rank of an embassy, which doubtless materially aided in securing the recognition of our institutions and which will be a permanent benefit to American nstitutions for all future time. "Furthermore, we tender to our Ambas-sador sincere thanks for the energy and efficiency with which he has protected the agricultural and industrial institute at Salonica, the girls' boarding school and the orphanage at Monastir and the board-ing school for Albanian girls at Korteha (Goritsa) during the long delay of the Ottoman government to grant the recog-nition and privileges to which they were entitled by treaty.

"We recommend that copies of this min-ute be forwarded to Ambassador Leish-man, to the State Department and to the Associated Press.'

RACE HORSE A BEER DRINKER

Robin Hood Gets a Can Every Time He Wins a Race.

New York Evening Telegram.

No wonder that Robin Hood wins so many races. He is a beer drinker. Much virtue lies in beer, for must it not invigorate a person when it makes a horse like Robin Hood win race after race. Old Robin must be like a performing seal, which, after doing a "stunt," is rewarded with a slab of fish for his effort. After every race he wins Robin Hood gets a kettle of beer, the best that Mayberry can buy. Let it be understood that Robin Hood gets his drink after a race, and not before, so it cannot come under the head of stimulating.

inder the head of stimulating.

It was a curious way that Robin Hood showed a disposition to be a toper. No one ever thought of his liking the juice of malt until some time ago, when one of the stable hands had a bucket of beer in his stall as a washdown for his lunch his stall as a washdown for his lunch. Robin Hood nosed about until he struck the bucket, and had his nose in the "can' before the rubber could call him off.

From all accounts he did not do a thing to the "booze," and when it was gone he pricked up his ears and looked around for more. It seemed to do him so much good that it has since become a part of his cooling out process. Let it be hoped that his extravagances stop at the beer keg and do not extend to the Dutch lunch keg and do not extend to the Dutch lunch counter, or he may become so attached to sauerkraut and pickles that he will fill up and become lazy. It would be a sad blow if he should sniff a "hot dog" coming down the stretch in a race and bolt to the fence to get one. Mayberry says that when he retires the old horse, instead of turning him out in the blue grass of Kentucky, he will cut him loose in a brewery to end his days.

now to a lower level than before the war. This is not true.

"The fact is that the salaries are considerably higher now than they were before the war. The stars of the leagues get more money; the youngsters get more. Minor leaguers breaking into fast company would work for anywhere from $500 to $1400 in their first season a few years ago; now the same men will get from $1200 to $1800.
