Stop the cars! Murder! Help!! lice!!! This may sound like a noise from the North End, but it isn't. Portland simply took the Seals into camp yestgrday at the Vaughn street battlegrounds-Tuesday and Wednesday the tourists from the earthquake belt pecked the twirlers that Manager Mac put at the mound and won with scandalous ease. It's a long lane that has no turn ing, and with Mr. Edward Kinsella slipping the clusive twisters down the alley, Captain Mohler's crew hadn't as much chance as an angle worm spied by a

The little bundle of tricks that whispers instructions to the Scals as they reach the altar of endeavor, sent Mr. Willis to mid diamond, just because he thought it was necessary to throw another kick into Portland's broken hinge. Captain Mobiler might have thought that there were no two-base swatters on the home team. If he thought this he will have to take a reef in his thinkery, for Donahue spanked two on the shout for two extra cushions, Mott made one, and so did Carson and Moore follow suit. Every one of the long slouts was good for the noise that makes the bell ring. and it so enthused a fan in the right land of bleach so that he cantered into the fle.d yelling, making a disturbance that sounded like Mabel and Jessie.

Just Kinsella's Clever Work,

Children, just listen! The game was Kinsella. As a mixologist, he had a should-twisted strangle hold on the Seals from the opening gong to tea time. The Seals flipped and flipped, but the best they could do off the serpentine volleys they could do off the serpentine volleys that he shot down the alley was three mange-eaten bingles. If he hadn't grown a little bit reckless in the sixth chapter and "driven" one into Esola's funny-bone, the Seals would have gone to their dessert with a smear of that stuff that they make the foul lines visible with. Anyway, the second round heard the bell clang for us. Bassey drew a promissory note, signed by Mr. Willis. Manager Mac thought it was about time to help Bassey collect interest, so he sacrificed. Mott, in his endeavor to make holes in the atmosphere, went too far, and there were two on the retired list. Professor Moore, who, when school dees not keep, plays baseball as a side issue, met one of Mr. Willis' finest and put it where "they sin't" for two perches. Do where "they ain't" for two perches. Do you wonder that Mabel smiles? Not when there is core beef and cabbage for Casey and a run comes home.

In the second spasm Kinselia singled-honest he did-but Fay put him in pickle at second.

Score With Two Out.

With two steeping in embalming fluid, it did not look like there was any chance of scoring. But Donahue, in spite of his game peg, rapped out his first two-bagger. Joe Fay tried to score on Casay's poke to Mohler and got a burial certificate at the plate. Now comes a funny bliffs. Donahue will warred to Casay. tificate at the plate. Now comes a funny thing. Donahue wig-wasged to Casey. He says, "Let's pull off a double steal."
"Fine," says Casey. Understand they're both Irish, Can't beat that combination. Donahue stole home and Casey second. More noise by the bell. It cracked once. In the sixth Manager Mac drove one past Mr. Willis. Now Mott was ready. He welted one down the third base line out of the reach of Fa Irwin. McCredie scored in a gallop and the bell made a noise like one. Just three.

Then there was nothing but Kinsella's fine handwork until the eighth. Donahue binged another for two bases. Oscar hue binged another for two bases. Osear hue binged another for two bases. Oscar Jones take notice. Pearle Casey put him on third with an infield dump. Mr. Wills grew weary of putling 'em over, so he walked McCredle and Mott. Bassey skied to Speneer, but there was lots of time for Groom, who was running bases for Donahue, to score. Four, That's speneer.

Spencer made one of the hits off Kinsella, and he made the lone are in the hole that the Seals took to dinner with them. Shaughnessy sacrificed, and while they were trying to morgue the Irishman, the guburn-haired lad took third. When Mr. Willis lammed a long fly to Donahue he registered. That's all. There will be hig doings at the Vaughn street spot of trouble this afternoon.
