No Winners In Coinword; Big Prize Spurs Entrants

EXPLANATIONS ACROSS

1. If a spy were suspect, he would be wise to HIRE a confederate and not take further risks himself. A confederate could probably HIDE himself.

2. The best thing to do about an irritating VESICLE or blister is to get rid of it as soon as possible. It might be better to repair a VEHICLE if its condition were the cause of irritation.

5. A sane person would never try to FEEL a rattlesnake, but an attendant at a zoo would undoubtedly FEED one.

6. A pedigreed dog might ignore a tiresome FLEA bothering some other animal. He would be apt to respond to his master's PLEA even if it were tiresome.

8. Early to bed and early to rise could be a good RULE if one did not have to work at night. It could be a bad RUSE or trick rather than a good one if someone pretended to retire early and then arose at 1 a.m. and went out.

9. Once upon a time, American women WORE almost any material obtainable. They WOVE cotton and wool strands but not finished material.

10. AY is an adverb meaning "yes."

13. A SPORTY pair of slacks would be out of place at a dance if the dance were formal. A SPOTTY pair would be out of place almost anywhere.

14. By asking a personal question about age, a boss might TACKLE a deceptive employe pretending to be older. It would not TICKLE or please the person who realized he or she had been discovered.

15. Starving on a raft, a sailor would probably be WASTED away before he was finally WASHED away.

EXPLANATIONS DOWN

1. HEAVY wines can make one very tired if they are carried any long distance. HEADY wines might be very exhilarating when consumed.

2. To escape the VICE of evil relatives, a rich old man might try to live alone. If his relatives numbered more than two he would not be caught in a VISE that squeezes from two sides only.

3. Spaghetti is difficult to manage quickly when it refuses to COIL around a fork. It has a tendency to COOL more rapidly than one is usually able to eat it.

4. Bullfighters know they are in danger whenever they ENGAGE a bull. They often have a less dangerous bull when it is necessary to ENRAGE him and sometimes they do not succeed in so doing.

5. The FATED life, decreed and controlled by fate, offers little chance for surprise when one's fate is known. The FAMED life can be full of daily surprises.

7. Parents who wish for a little JOY may have a daughter who could give them happiness if they sought other pleasures less. Parents who wish for a BOY would know that he is bound to be little when born.

8. Sometimes the shoemaker REMOVES his shoes when he is very tired and at home. He probably RESOLES his own shoes when he feels energetic and has time away from soling other shoes.

9. Energy may WAKE as a long-needed vacation approaches and new plans are being made. Energy is more likely to WANE or diminish before a long-needed vacation approaches.

11. It is not very nice to STORE clothes or other articles while guests are visiting and expecting to be entertained. It would be quite permissible to STARE if everyone were watching TV or screened pictures of the guests' last trip.

12. A FAKE may be perfectly clear and still be deep if someone observing him is especially bright. No LAKE is perfectly clear, shallow or deep.

13. Lost in the woods, a child could be in a nasty STEW or predicament. If he were in a SLEW or marshy river inlet, he could be out of the woods.

Klamath Ranks Second In June Building

Corrected figures have revealed that Klamath Falls was second among Oregon cities in June in value of building permits issued.

Klamath Falls, with $2,636,150 in permits during the month, was second only to Portland, with about $6.5 million.

Standings compiled by Equitable Savings and Loan Association of Portland had stated that Medford issued permits worth about $6.6. million, but these figures were questioned by Klamath Falls Building Inspector Verne Schortgen.

Schortgen has received a letter from the association stating that Medford's figures were in error and the oversight would be corrected.

Most of Klamath Falls' total was accounted for by the $2.5 million construction program at Oregon Technical Institute.

Hall of Famer Ty Cobb, who batted a record .367 during his 24 years in the major leagues, hit only .240 for the Detroit Tigers in his rookie season.

190 Take Shop Study

Some 190 high school student leaders participated in the 13th Oregon Student Council Workshop held last week on the University of Oregon campus.

Approximately the same number of students are also expected this week for the 14th session. The total number of participants will represent 75 per cent of all Oregon high schools, according to Dr. Arthur Hearn, professor of education at the university and coordinator of the workshops.

Both sessions are aimed at developing techniques and providing experience in group leadership for new student council leaders and their sponsors, said Dr. Hearn. The workshops are also designed to help create more uniform practices in student council work in Oregon.

The Oregon Association of Student Councils is conducting the workshops. Assisting are the Oregon Association of Secondary School Principals and the Oregon State Department of Education.

Dr. Donald I. Wood, visiting lecturer at the university, and professor of education at Rice University, is consultant for the sessions. Director is Amelia Auld of Madison High School, Portland. Marie Allen, Lincoln High School, Portland, is assistant director. Tom Calkins, executive secretary of OASC, is a coordinator with Dr. Hearn.
