Fort Rock Homesteader Dies In Bend Hospital

FORT ROCK — William L. Dehne, 92, homesteader and Fort Rock resident for well over half a century, died in Bend Monday, Feb. 22, where he has been a patient at the Sunset Home for the past three years.

He was born in Centerville, Wis., June 14, 1872, and was a veteran of the Spanish-American War. He was wounded in the battle of Santiago, Cuba, in 1898, then returned to service to fight in the Luzon insurrection in the Philippines.

Dehne came to the Fort Rock Valley from Spokane by team and wagon in the Fort Rock homesteading era. He took four miles south of Fremont, then a trading center and post office. There he operated a dairy farm until 1952, increasing his dry farm operation to 640 acres.

He gained recognition as dean of Oregon weathermen, having taken daily observations at one station for more than 40 years, with over 14,000 observations.

Before becoming the official cooperative weather observer in 1918 he measured precipitation with an improvised device for two years.

Dehne was a member of Fort Rock Grange and the Bend Veterans of Foreign Wars. He was active in a Spanish-American group for many years.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Floyd Brandis, Fort Rock, and Mrs. Marion Schnick, Bend. There are four grandchildren and one great-grandaughter. His wife, Dorothea, preceded him in death in August, 1957. Also surviving are three of his 15 brothers and sisters, Emil Dehne of Kohler, Wis., and Mrs. Mamie Green and Mrs. Minnie Triplett of Huron, S. D.

Services were held at 1:30 p. m. Thursday, Feb. 25, at Niswonger - Reynolds Chapel, Bend. The Rev. D. L. Penholow officiated and burial was in the Pilot Butte Cemetery.

Members of the Bend VFW conducted military graveside rites.

Honorary pall bearers were Charles C. Miles, Edwin A. Estelin, Nick Klerk, C. B. Webster, E. S. Steigleder and Bill Mattis.

Edgewood Horse Named Champion

WEED—Boomer Isle, owned by the Samuel Ordway Ranch, Edgewood, Calif., was named the Pacific Northwest All-Around Champion Quarter Horse by the Northwest Quarter Horse Association, and was honored a second time by the group on being named high-point gelding.

This is the second year in succession that Boomer Isle has held the championship title taking champion points in all classes including roping, working cow horse, western pleasure, western riding and halter classes.

The winning chestnut gelding comes from Ordway's Shasta "O" Ranch near Weed. He was trained by the ranch manager, Robert Hollister. Hollister is the director of the State of Jefferson Quarter Horse Association in Grants Pass.

In taking the two top honors, Boomer Isle was awarded two saddles, one for champion the other for high-point gelding.
