America Unites Under the NRA Banner

THE encouraging thing about the program now being attempted by the National Recovery Administration is not so much that it is helping to beat the depression as that it is providing a rallying point for the emotional forces of the American people.

It is sometimes said that our country has grown too big—that its population is so large and its distances so vast that its people find it almost impossible to unite in any common cause.

At times, perhaps, this is quite true. What arouses the Pacific coast often leaves the middle west cold; what stirs the middle west is apt to be of small interest along the Atlantic. We are a people of diverse interests and, occasionally, of divided loyalties.

But here is something that is taking hold everywhere. The blue eagle looks out from store and office windows along thousands upon thousands of miles of highways. Everywhere it stands for a mass awakening, a common cause which is appealing to Americans of every section and every class.

It is, in fact, a unifying force of a kind that we have not known since the war; and in its ultimate effects it may be a much more profound thing than any emotion the war brought us.

For the enthusiasm of 1917 was a crude thing, in spots, and it was followed by disillusion. We felt ourselves lifted up, but in the let-down that followed we could not help seeing that there had been something just a little spurious about it all. Our ideals got lost sight of in the rush. We had been brought together, but no one had applied cement to make our new union stick.

What we are getting now is something different. We are getting, at last, a new vision of what a united America could mean; a new realization of the mountains that might be moved if the American people as a whole could recover the faith that is their heritage.

We are engaged in an attempt to recover that faith, in a fight to gain a unity of purpose and outlook that will make up for the spiritual deafness of the post-war years.

It is a daring plan, this great American people. The signs today indicate that it is about to awaken. When it does there is nothing that will not be possible for it to accomplish.

The Little Fellow Pays

INVESTIGATIONS of closed banks, which are bringing to light some of the reasons for their collapse, reflect considerable credit on smaller borrowers for their integrity and their business judgment.

By and large it seems to have been the inability of banks to collect on a relatively small number of big loans which pulled them under. The so-called financiers, who required huge sums of other people's money to carry on their operations, were the ones who left the banks in the lurch.

The little fellows, in much larger percentage, stepped up to the line and paid off.

The condition was part and parcel of the era of frenzied finance, with its extravagant expectations and its gigantic "goals," for which dependents are now paying. Current revelations should do much to indicate to bankers where they can safely farm out their depositors' funds.

Repeal is making vintage. Fourteen formally ratified and 22 to go.

Plenty of Gold

ANYONE who has been disturbed by the fear that the nation's currency was not backed by an adequate supply of gold will be relieved by news that the Federal Reserve banks now hold more of the yellow metal than at any time during the year, and more than at any time during the two prosperous years preceding the 1929 collapse.

Holdings have increased during the year by $400,000,000 to reach a total of $4,300,000,000, which is more than the reserve banks have had at any period during their 20 years of operation.

Total gold stocks of the country, which include amounts held by the treasury, are $4,250,000,000.

It may be puzzling to understand why, with all the gold that is available, the country remains off the gold standard. Whatever the answer is to that question, it is comforting to know that the gold is there.

Secretary Ickes says all the thieves around public lands should be removed. That's a good job for someone. In the near administration someone else will find employment in rebuilding them.

FOUR MEN KILLED IN TRAIN CRASH

SALISBURY, Md., Aug. 12 (AP)—Four men were fatally injured and four others hurt near here early today when the Pennsylvania railroad fast express, "The Cavalier," struck a section of track that apparently had been tampered with and overturned.

A. F. McIlvaine, trainmaster in charge of the Cape Charles division, after an inspection of the wreck, today said it had been caused by "malicious tampering with the rails."

He did not amplify this statement.

Brown, an engineman for 18 years, was extricated from the wreckage of his locomotive. Both legs and one arm were broken and he sustained internal injuries, dying at the hospital two hours later.

GOVERNOR MEIER VISITS MEDFORD

MEDFORD, Ore., Aug. 12 (AP)—Governor Julius L. Meier spent an hour here this morning enroute to Gold Beach, where he will spend a brief vacation. The chief executive is returning from the American Legion convention at Klamath Falls with a side trip to Crater Lake.

The governor was delighted to be advised that his telegram to President Roosevelt, urging a higher price for cannery pears to give the grower at least the cost of production, was favorably acted upon.

The governor issued a statement in which he said that "the vital needs of Oregon were changed power to attract manufacturing industries, and lower rates to attract capital and more people."

Cavemen Pleased With Convention

Dick Seldom, Chief Big Horn of the Grants Pass Cavemen, has expressed his appreciation to the city of Klamath Falls for the reception of the Cavemen's representatives here. They were one of the outstanding features of the American Legion convention.

WASHINGTON

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

The Inside Story From The Capital

By PAUL MALLON
(Copyright, 1933, by Paul Mallon)

Yelps

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—The wolves of Wall Street are beginning to yelp politely on the administration recovery program.

One of the largest brokerage houses is circulating a private letter to its clients suggesting the N. R. A. is causing unemployment. This letter asserts the confusion caused by the high wage drive is hurting rather than helping business generally.

Mr. Roosevelt keeps himself closely informed about such subversive activities. Apparently he found out about this letter before it was in the mails.

At any rate he moved swiftly to counteract it. He leaped to the front pages Thursday morning with an announcement that everything was fine—just fine.

• • •

A searcher for the indisputable truth behind the situation will find himself currently up against an impossible barricade.

The reason you have seen no N. R. A. figures showing how many men are going back to work is because there aren't any. Neither are there any authentic August indices on buying power.

The government collects such figures once a month. Their estimates are entirely trustworthy. Weekly statistics are issued by certain Wall Street stockbrokers. These cannot always be trusted. Real businessmen pay no attention to them.

• • •

Mr. Roosevelt based his optimism on charts by Prof. Warren. The charts were without from July reports. They show everything Mr. Roosevelt set forth in his announcement. Improvement was noted all along the line in July.

Industrial production was still considerably out of line with employment and wages, but the gap was being lessened. Since August 1, however, there have been murmurs indicating a change.

Such figures as are available just at a moderate slackening of the business pace. Carloadings and steel production are outstanding examples.

Automobile production dropped rather sharply this week.

• • •

The big question is whether this moderation is being accompanied by curtailed employment and diminished purchasing power. If the N. R. A. is working, these indications should not worry anyone. They mean production is slackening to employment and wages can catch up. If the N. R. A. is not bringing re-employment, the kinks are serious.

No one can find out until the month is over and good figures are available.

Meanwhile, definitions are premature.

• • •

Guzzy!

The walls of the N. R. A. building bulged a few days back when the legal experts began impromptuing wild lines and tips.

The cause of it all was a wire sent to the New Hampshire public service commission July 28. This wire stated emphatically that power companies under state regulation were not subject to the N. R. A. The ruling was signed by a N. R. A. legal official.

Apparently the commission began to get suspicious about the ruling when it saw General Johnson going ahead with a power code. It checked up. The legal official was confronted with his wire.

He slipped over his desk in the continent and shattered the windows with some choice language.

"The Western Union will hear about this," he shouted. "I never sent such a wire."

Later an investigation was made. It was found that an underling in the office had sent the wire and signed the name of the official.

• • •

Cuba

All our officials from the lowest to the highest have their knuckles out for Machado.

They could hardly contain their glee when the Spanish ambassador and British minister at Havana came to our ambassador Sumner Welles with their troubles, instead of going to the Cuban government.

The Spaniard protested against the killing of three of his subjects by Cuban police. The British protested against destruction of British property in the interior.

That offered the excuse for our intervention, if one was needed.

Britain and Spain clearly had the intervention idea in mind when they took such an unusual course. Cuba is a sovereign state. The American ambassador is not the man to receive protests against the Cuban government.

The fact that protests were taken to him would indicate that Europe considered him president of Cuba rather than Machado, pro—he was.

• • •

Notes

Those who saw Treasury Secretary Woodin at Hyde Park this week report they do not see how he can continue in office. They say he looked very badly. They could not believe their ears when a presidential spokesman said there Woodin was not resigning. They debated the subject with the spokesman. He insisted on his announcement.

• • •

The Edison Electric Institute has lost more than two members because of the proposed power code. Only two have been announced, but the institute has been privately notified by several others that they intend to resign.

The navy has been on its toes for a week, eager for intervention in Cuba. An official of the department recently said:

"If we have to intervene, the navy will be ready." A cynical aide wanted the official such a statement might sound bad in print. The official withdrew it and declined to be quoted.

Editorials on News

"Want something for one't?"

"You said it," was the answer. "I've been playing this 4——d lively music all night, and now I'm looking for somebody who's willing to tip me if I can play Taps over him."

• • •

NOW, BOYS: That's all right. And extremely moderate.

Why, at an Oregon convention a little while back, a gentleman was discovered on the morning after down in a hallway in the basement of the hotel. There was a large key in the hallway, and he was trying to get past it. But every time he tried, he bumped into it.

And every time he would bounce into the box, he would remove his hat, bow graciously and exceedingly, and say in a tone of the gravest and most reverent misery: "I beg your pardon, madam; I didn't mean to do it."

Just one of the little incidents of conventions.

• • •

HERE, by the way, is Jack Duke's explanation of why Ashland's kilted pageant corps didn't run away with the pennant.

Somebody, it seems, dropped a penny out on the parade ground and every time these Ashlanders, with their Scotch clothes, would pass the penny they'd falter and drop a step.

This isn't offered as gospel truth. It's merely taking Jack's word for it.

• • •

AND here's a touch of home town pride:

When Klamath's drum corps, organized only a few months ago, against years ago for most of the others, with Dewey Powell strutting his stuff and the rest of the boys snapping into the maneuvers with beautiful precision, came out on the field, a visitor from across the mountains said with the tone of conviction in his voice:

"Whatever Klamath Falls starts to do she does a fine job of, doesn't she?"

• • •

THANKS for those words, neighbor. They're music in our ears. That's the thing we're particularly proud of here in Klamath Falls. When we start something, we certainly aim to do a good job of it.

But pardon the boasting, please, while our visitors are still here. It just slipped out.

For a host to brag about himself in the presence of his guests is really unpardonable.

• • •

THEY'RE a great lot, these Legionnaires. None better on earth. They're OUR KIND OF PEOPLE.

Klamath is an up-and-coming YOUNG town, with its future ahead of it and its chin up in the air. And the whole great Klamath country is just the same way.

That's the kind of people these Legionnaires are. That's why we're loved 'em so while they have been here, and it's why we're so downcast at the thought of seeing 'em leave.

We're proud beyond all power of expression of having had the opportunity of entertaining them, and we're living in the hope that they'll come back to us some day.

STOCKMEN DISCUSS PRICE FIXING PLAN

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 12 (AP)—Packers, livestock raisers and retailers were told here today that the Institute of American Meat Packers has proposed that it be allowed under direction of the secretary of agriculture, to fix prices paid for livestock and for meat food products throughout the United States.

The statement was made at today's session of livestock association, grange and farmer union leaders of the western states who are meeting to take preliminary steps in the formation of an organization of producers and shippers of livestock to bargain collectively.

THOMAS RULES ON PHONE COMPANIES

SALEM, Aug. 12 (AP)—Until telephone operators can show that they are not obtaining a fair rate of return on their investments or the public utility department has established a rate base, no increases in telephone rates under the NRA program will be authorized by the public utility department, Commissioner C. M. Thomas stated today.

F. B. McKinnon, president of the United States Independent Telephone association, sent a telegram of inquiry on this point to George Bateman of Forest Grove, secretary of the Oregon Local Telephone association.

LINDBERGH FINDS UNCHARTED MOUNT

NEW YORK, Aug. 12 (AP)—The sighting of a mountain higher than any other heretofore known in Greenland and unrecorded on maps has been reported by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife, who are charting a northern air route to Europe.

Another topographical feature which the Lindberghs reported could not be found on charts was a fiord, or possibly navigable waterway, which they followed inland for more than a hundred miles.

Officials of Pan-American Airways, Inc., who received the reports, said both discoveries may force sharp revision of existing maps of the region.

Earlier Days

From Files of The Klamath Republican, August, 1909

George I. Wright, son of Dr. W. A. Wright, will engage in the practice of medicine in this city. His office will be located in the Worden building with Dr. Mason, dentist. Dr. Wright is an Oregon boy, and a graduate of the Northwestern Medical school of Chicago. He spent last year in St. Luke's hospital there. Since graduating he passed the examination before both the Oregon and California medical boards. Dr. Wright also bears the honor of being the first graduate from the high school before Klamath county was established.

Elm Baldwin is getting in the lumber for remodeling his garage and putting it in good shape. He expects to complete the work very soon.
