Specimens of a Parasite Brought in. Contention Between Oystermen Operating in Yaquina Bay About Their Privileges.

SALEM, Or., Aug. 6.—(Special.)—Protection and fostering the oyster industry of the state was the absorbing subject before the State Board of Fish Commissioners this afternoon, which developed a mild case of jealously and discord between the Oystermen's Association of Yaquina Bay and the promoters of the Eastern and Japanese oyster industry of that harbor. Japanese oyster industry of that harbor. The object is to adopt a set of rules to regulate the industry in all oyster-producing harbora in the state and to Master Fish Warden Van Dusen is delegated the task of bringing the conflicting interests together and to formulate a general code of regulations satisfactory to all concerned.

The Oystermen's Association, which is striving to perpetuate the industry on Yaquina Bay, seek to require the employes of the "capitalists," M. M. Davis, of Newport and John D. Wilcox, of Portland, who are prompting the Pacture. land, who are promoting the Eastern oyster industry and experimenting with the propagation of Japanese oysters on private and natural heds on Yaquina Bay, to replant all of the shells of native oysters taken from the natural beds for oysters taken from the natural beds for spawning purposes. On the other hand, the owners of private beds demand the same recognition and privileges for their men as are granted the native oyster fishermen. Both interests are striving to perpetuate the industry and no trouble is anticipated in bringing them together. annicipated in bringing them together.

George King and Albert Bailey, of the lystermen's Association, and veteran shermen on the bay, brought along a ollection of oysters and shells which were considered to the control of the infested with barnacles and demonstrated to the Board that this great salt-water cannibal is encroaching upon the oysters in the fresh-water spawning grounds and threatens dire results to the industry. They fasten upon the shells, deposited for spawning purposes and devour the oyster spot as fast as they adhere to the surface. Mr. King also brought a specimen of the shell fish known as the "drilt," which he says is becoming quite numerous in the bay and threatens to damage the native oyster industry greatly. These "frills," which are of the snail family, attack a full-grown oyster, drill a hole through the shell and suck the oyster out.

BUILDING ROADS IN CHEHALIS

Great Activity Throughout County Spending $75,000.

ABERDEEN, Wash., Aug. 6 .- (Special.)—The building of the Northern Pacific branch to Moclips has started the county building good roads through the same territory, and the result is important, as opening up a large extent of country to new settlers.

Everywhere can be observed clear-ings and new building, and Chehalis County will profit extensively in the near future by the development that is going on.

Between Aberdeen and Moclips there are a dozen small towns, in which the railroad company has erected stations. The greater part of the new territory was a wilderness a few years ago. In the building of roads, the County Com-missioners are using a new steam road machine with beneficial results. All over Chehalis County there is a general desire for better roads, and the County Commissioners will expend this year probably $75,000 in opening up roads through new districts.

Beddoe brothers, two young ranchers of the Cowiche Valley, came to the city today to lay a complaint against "Squaw" Miller and Mrs. Jane Conney, who have a farm adjoining that of the Beddoes and who live together as man and wife.

The story told by the Beddoes discloses a strange condition of affairs such as is only possible in a country far removed from city life and influences. Miller is said to be a "bad" man, and the woman, who used to be be equally bad. The Beddoe boys told the Sheriff that whenever they come within range of a shotgun either Mrs. Conney or Miller point a gun at them and force them to run away. The couple also use the most shocking language it is said and one of ing language, it is said, and one of the boys says that if something is not done to prevent this abuse and interference with him and his brother he proposes to kill both Miller and the fortune-teller. The trouble arose through Miller diverting water from the Beddoes' private ditch.
