HE MARCHED WITH SHERMAN, trudged all the way on foot, over mountain and through morass, carrying knapsack and gun, slept on brush heaps to keep out of the mud, caught cold, from the effects of which his friends thought he would never recover. Lingering with slow consumption for many years, he saw Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery advertised in a country newspaper, and he determined to try it. A few bottles worked a change; six months' continued use cured him. Always too independent to ask his country for a pension, he now says he needs none. He hoped save his country, he saved himself! Consumption is Lung-scrofula. For scrofula, in all its myriad forms, the "Discovery" is an unequaled remedy. It cleanses the system of all blood-taints from whatever cause arising, and cures all Skin and Scalp Diseases, Salt-rheum, Tetter, Eczema, and kindred ailments. It is guaranteed to benefit or cure in all diseases for which it is recommended, or money paid for it will be refunded. Sold by druggists.

DEMANDED LEGISLATION.

Thoughts Fresh from the Fearless Pens of Oregon Writers, With Running Comment.

The JOURNAL believes it has done much good by its digests of public opinion in relation to legislation, for the reason that it created a disposition to more closely and universally discuss these things than ever before. By grouping in concise form the demands from the several sections of the state it has enabled the watchful legislator to prepare himself in advance, and there will be no necessity for such a waste of time as characterized the last session.

There seems to be a general admission that the public is vastly ignorant of what laws we have and that a means should be provided making it possible for poor and rich, farmer, mechanic or laborer to reach and understand them. The Oregon City Enterprise treats this subject very intelligently, closing an editorial as follows: "It is very important that every voter should read and become acquainted with the new enactments as passed by each succeeding legislature. The proper and most economical way to do this is for the legislature to provide for the publication of the session laws passed at each biennial term, in the newspapers. The masses everywhere would then be conversant with all the requirements of the statutes, and there would be fewer violations, and hundreds of dollars would be saved the state in prosecutions."

The matter of taxing church property is again vigorously discussed. The Corvallis Times wants all church property above $500 in value taxed. It also thinks that "unless the acquisition of property by church corporations is soon curtailed there will be trouble in camp." The article concludes with this admonition:

"If our lawmakers would do something to benefit those who most need help, they would increase the amount of general exemption of household furniture from $300 to $500 and strike out the exemption of church property all over $500. This would give poor churches and poor people a chance to breathe. Then with the swindle of the deducting of indebtedness repealed we would have a pretty good tax law."

The Stayton Sun is afraid of any attempt to tamper with the assessment laws and thinks it better to wait until the whole system is changed, even to the Henry George theory. The Sun is not as clear as it might be and must be a little in doubt what it really does want.

The Oregon City Courier wants three laws: Providing for the publication of the laws in the newspapers; the publication of the proceedings of county courts, and compelling sheriffs to publish the delinquent tax list with the lowest bidder.

The Pendleton Tribune, an able republican journal, does not favor the repeal of the mortgage tax law and punctures some of the arguments used for its repeal. It says: "Again the claim is that money demands and obtains a higher rate of interest and yet is run out of the state. This is the most inconsistent and superficial of all the statements. Money generally goes where it commands the highest rate of interest, and if the mortgage tax law results in giving it a higher rate of interest that is the market it will seek. There is another peculiar thing about this matter, and that is that it is mouled men that lead in the demand for the repeal of the mortgage tax law."

The McMinnville Reporter, a candid and carefully edited republican paper, takes a different view from the Tribune. It says: "The theory and justice of the law appears to be all right, but it fails of the purpose which it was designed to accomplish, of shifting the burden of taxation from the shoulders of the debtor to those of the creditor. If that is true, let the law be repealed—not sustain it simply because its aim is philanthropic when its effect is the opposite. It is evidently a lame law, in that it permits the escape of so much property represented by securities from taxation, and should either be repealed or amended so as to make the taxes upon securities a lien upon the property which they represent."

The Roseburg Plaindealer wants a state board of equalization, and wants more assessors; thinks the counties should be divided into districts, with a local assessor. The Eugene Register thinks the assessment laws need doctoring, but it has no specific to offer.

The Tillamook Watchtower does not think the county court is at present constituted just right. It would have each county divided into three districts, each district electing a commissioner and let these elect their own chairman. This would cut loose from the county judge, who has a judicial power also.

The Corvallis Gazette has a column and a half of carefully written editorial showing the injustice and hurtful tendency of the mortgage tax law, closing with this: "The legislature of Oregon will subserve the best interests of the state if it expunges from the statutes the mortgage tax law and as much of its attendant legislation as tends to keep outside capital from investment in Oregon enterprises and Oregon securities."

Among the new and fresh subjects started, the Woodburn Independent, backed by the Stayton Sun, demands a law giving all county officers a salary instead of fees. It is very doubtful if such a law could be made practicable. The Pendleton Tribune thinks "the state of Oregon should provide for the publication of its own school books, thereby liberating the people from one of the most accursed monopolies in existence," and some such theory will meet a response among the people before many years. The school book tax is one of the heaviest the poor man has to bear.

There is one department of legislation upon which the newspapers of the state are strangely silent—that of railroad control, and yet there are few things of more vital importance. Oregon people are at present entirely at the mercy of the railroads, while in almost every other state in the nation it is the other way. There should be no desire for oppression, but there should be an established code of public rights that railroads or other corporations should be forced to respect, and while there has not been much said yet on the subject in print, it would not surprise the writer to find legislation of this nature absorbing the deepest interest next winter.

Salem Juveniles at Gervais.

The French Prairie Gazette, of Oct. 4, has this notice of "A Night Off:"

"Daily's popular comedy was presented at the public hall in this city on Thursday evening of last week, by Salem's Juvenile Dramatic Company. The play had been liberally advertised and every fellow and his girl came out for a "Night off," to enjoy a pleasant evening and see something in the way of a first-class performance. Seats sold rapidly and the house was crowded early in the evening. The advertised fire works and street parade took place, but were rather tame affairs. The music was a failure, owing probably to only a part of the band being present. At 8 o'clock the curtains arose on the first scene, with J. L. Mitchell, the professor writing a play to be presented before the foot-lights. He sustained his caste passably well and in some parts did exceedingly well, but it was evident that he could better write a play than produce one.

Dell Dinsmore, as Marcus Brutus Snapp, made the hit of the evening. His make up was very good and his acting was first class in every particular. The rest of the male characters were very good support, and it was clearly evident they had not followed the stage for a livelihood. Of the lady characters, Miss Edith Farrar sustained her part as Susan, in a very clever manner. She seemed at home on the stage and performed in a very pleasing way the most difficult part of the play, and brought applause from the audience quite frequently. Miss Ella Arbegast made a very good jealous wife and an excellent mother-in-law. She acted her part with such dignity and air, becoming her caste, that could be appreciated. Miss Jennie Booth, as the youngest "imp of the family," did remarkably well for one of her age, and showed she was possessed of some good talent, which if developed would make her quite a good amateur performer. Miss Crump, while making a very pretty appearance on the stage, did not seem to be at ease in her caste and failed to add life to the play. As a whole the performance was fairly good, but the play did not seem to enthuse the Gervais public, and it was either a lack of appreciation to know a good play when they see it, or the entertainment was a "punk" affair as some would choose to call it. We think the fault lies in the fact that our people expected too much; they were led to believe from the flaming posters that they were to be treated to a first-class dramatic performance, and in this of course they were somewhat disappointed. It is but justice to say that they produced the play under the most adverse circumstances, the drop curtain being a most miserable failure, and considerably embarrassed the performers, besides the seating capacity of the hall was poorly arranged. The orchestra which furnished the music for the entertainment and dance was something very fine, in fact, it was the best we have had the pleasure of listening to for some time, and was highly spoken of by all present. The little episode which took place at the close of the dance was uncalled for by all concerned and a disgrace to those who participated in it.

Ordinance No. 196.

An ordinance bill providing for the protection of public sewers, the manner of making connection therewith, and for making a record of such connections.

Be it ordained by the common council of the city of Salem.

SECTION 1.—It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to obstruct or in any manner interfere with any public sewer within the city of Salem, or to make connection therewith without the written permission of the city recorder.

SECTION 2.—Any person desiring such connection, before making the same, shall make application in writing to the recorder for a permit therefor, particularly describing the premises to be drained and the point of juncture with said public sewer.

SECTION 3.—The city recorder is hereby authorized to grant permits for such connections, subject to such restrictions as to the size and material of such connecting pipe, the location of traps and the manner of doing the work, as the recorder and committee on streets and public property may deem necessary. And, when requested by said committee, he shall require from the applicant a bond or other security sufficient in amount to indemnify the city against loss or damage resulting from his carelessness, imperfect work or material, or failure to comply with the terms of the permit or of this ordinance.

SECTION 4.—The person obtaining such permit shall make the connection therein authorized in accordance with its terms, under the supervision of the street commissioner as provided in ordinance 178; he shall cause the portion of the street or alley disturbed by him to be placed in good condition; and notify the recorder in writing of the completion of the work, that a record may be kept of such connection.

SECTION 5.—The recorder shall make a record, in a suitable book, of all connections heretofore made with the public sewers of the city, and such as may be hereafter made under the provision of this ordinance, showing the location, size and material of the connecting pipe, the point of juncture with the public sewer, and the name of the person or persons to whom the permit was granted together with the time when such connection was made, and shall make such other record relating thereto as said committee may direct.

SECTION 6.—Any person violating any of the provisions of sections 1 or 4 of this ordinance, shall upon conviction thereof before the recorder, be fined in a sum not exceeding fifty dollars. A true copy.
