"THE KING'S TOUCH."

In England, two centuries ago, popular superstition credited the "Royal Touch" with curing scrofula. These superstitious practices have now become obsolete, and in their place we have a scientific remedy in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which eliminates the impurities from the blood by the natural channels, thereby cleansing the system from all taints and humors whatever, cause arising. It is truly a royal remedy, world-famed, and the only liver, lung and blood remedy guaranteed to benefit or cure in every case, or money paid for it will be refunded. As a regulator of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, "Golden Medical Discovery" cures all bilious attacks, Indigestion and Dyspepsia, Chronic Diarrhœa and kindred ailments. As an alterative, or blood purifier, it manifests its marvelous properties in the cure of the worst Skin and Scalp Diseases, Salt-rheum, Tetter, Eczema, and scrofulous Sores and Swellings, as well as Lung scrofula, commonly known as Pulmonary Consumption, if taken in time and given a fair trial. WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Irrigation Scheme to Bring 150,000,000 Acres More Land Into Competition With the Farmers.

From the American Cultivator and Country Gentleman, Nov. 8.

In calling attention recently to the ever-increasing burden with which our American agriculture is most unduly handicapped by the action of the national government in dividing up our cultivated public lands into farms as fast as anybody will buy them at a nominal price or take them as a gift—thus doing all that the nation can do to develop a constantly growing competition with the established agricultural industry of the United States—we mentioned the additional menace of certain "wild schemes of a wholesale irrigation of desert territory" at national expense, involving of course the indirect but very real taxation of every farmer in the country, for the purpose of starting in business, on territory not now tillable, a number of other people as his direct competitors, people who would normally want either to buy his farm or to work on it for him on wages. The inequity of such a proceeding seems hardly to need argument; if it were aimed at any other interest than farming—if for instance it were proposed that forty or fifty millions of dollars belonging to the national treasury should be expended in erecting stove foundries or woolen mills to be offered practically rent free to such impecunious but enterprising individuals as might like to try their hands at running them—what a storm of protest would instantly rise! But action already taken by congress, and the tone of certain debates that occurred during the last session, indicate clearly the strong probability, to which it is worse than useless to shut one's eyes, that unless farmers (and especially the farmers' organizations) make known in positive and unmistakable manner their indignant disapproval of the whole scheme, the government may at no distant time, perhaps this coming winter, become almost irretrievably committed to it.

Action already taken by our lawmakers at Washington includes the appropriation of $100,000 in October, 1888, (the thin edge of an opening wedge) followed by the further appropriation of $250,000 the next March, and we believe that of a still larger amount last summer, for the establishment and development of an "irrigation survey" operated by Maj. J. W. Powell, who is generally regarded as the father and chief promoter of the whole folly. These vast sums of money however are only trifles in comparison with the expected demands of the future—"inadequate," Maj Powell says, "to operate economically" [even for preliminary observations] "in all the states and territories where arid lands exist." "To complete the survey as we have been going on, without laying out the reservoirs, without laying out the sites for hydraulic works and canals and so on, would take about $5,000,000." For the actual construction of an irrigating system that will bring into fertility the 100,000,000 acres which he would like to see devoted to competition with our present farming territory, many more millions will be needed, asked for, and we fear granted, unless something be done to make congressmen appreciate the injury to public good that would follow such action, or the injury to their own political prospects that ought to follow it, in every agricultural district.

One or two items from the debate on the sundry civil appropriation bill in the senate last summer will show how little the representatives of the trans Missouri region, especially, consider the great wrong that even our present land policy is doing to the farmers in the older states, to say nothing of the greater wrong involved in the irrigation project. Mr. Teller, of Colorado, remarked:

"If there was ever a people on the face of the earth who needed and deserved the assistance of the government, it is the people who go out upon the public lands to make themselves homes. They are compelled, in a great majority of cases to borrow the money with which to start their farms. They are compelled to borrow the money with which to get their teams, in many cases to get their houses built on their land, to pay for their land."

Why these people should not stay in the East, and work for those who already own farms, until they have saved money enough to buy small places for themselves, or why the government should be expected to set up farmers in business, any more than any other class of men, the senator did not trouble himself to explain. But getting warmed up as he proceeded, he indulged in a peroration of which a portion follows, italics ours:

"We do not want interference with the settlement of this great western country. It is the only place where a man can get a home now without paying a great price. * * My own judgment is that if the government of the United States would give to every man who would make a home in this arid region not only the land but a bonus, public good would be the result."

It strikes us there is a good deal of fallacy in this use of the word "home." A farm is primarily a factory, and should be considered as such in all discussions of the political economy of the matter. Of course the owner may live on the premises; so may the owner of a cotton mill. However, the Teller idea of subsidizing all these new factories was not quite strong enough for an Oregon senator, Mr. Dolph, who would go further still, and subsidize irrigating corporations as well! "I heard some talk to-day," he said, "about a company that had undertaken to construct a ditch to cost a million dollars. We ought to give such a company a subsidy. Instead of selling the land to them at a dollar and a quarter an acre, we ought to give it to any one who will convert the desert land of this country into arable land." To compete in market with every farmer for any reason is offered for sale! This doctrine is doubtless "good politics" at the far West, where of course every movement in the direction of increasing the number of voters is highly popular; but what do the farmers of the older states think of it? Well, they are in a position to appreciate the simple commonsense of a remark by Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin:

"Mr. President, at a time when farm products are none too high, at a time when the market for farm products is none too large, I do not believe the farmers of the United States will value the statesmanship or the patriotism which proposes to tax them by the millions to hasten by artificial means the creation of new farms and to add illimitably to the mass of farm products."

The farmers of the country, we say, will appreciate the wisdom of this remark. Whether they will put their appreciation into such tangible form as shall practically effect legislation at Washington this winter, depends largely on the leaders of our granges, alliances, leagues, and similar unions. If the attention of the members of these bodies can be called off from chimerical and useless projects, and united upon the one simple plan of demanding of their representatives in congress, not only action for stopping the alienation of our public lands, in general, but also active and determined opposition to the Powell irrigation iniquity, in particular, the greatest calamity that has threatened our agriculture for many years and may easily be averted. If that calamity falls, it will be largely the farmers themselves that are to blame. They have the veto power; will they use it?

Intentions of the Union Pacific.

The Astorian: Notwithstanding all that has been said by the Oregonian and other papers of the state of Oregon regarding the rumored intentions of the Union Pacific railroad company, and the duties of that corporation to the state from which it derives so much of its support, the Union is going quietly to work to further its projects on the other side of the bay, with the evident intention of holding Oregon in subjection and preventing its development. It is an open secret that the Union will build at or near Frankfort, where the company or some of its officials have acquired considerable property of late. Some will doubtless argue that this move will be detrimental to the best interests of Astoria, and that the furtherance of the plans of the Union in this direction will do much to retard the progress on this side of the bay. While there is no reason to believe otherwise than that the Union is going deliberately to work to injure Oregon in general, and Astoria in particular, by building a city near or at Frankfort, the plan may not be as successful as that grinding monopoly fondly hopes. If this is done, the Union cannot hope to keep other railroads from building on this side. It is only a question of time when the North ern Pacific will seek an outlet for its trans-continental business at the mouth of the Columbia, and the Union, anticipating the fact, seems determined to be first in the field and checkmate its rival. But there is another side to the case. It should not be forgotten that the interest of Astoria and Frankfort will be allied in the future, and that anything directly assisting one city will most assuredly assist the other. All the shipping, or nearly all, which will be done in the future north of San Francisco, will come to the Columbia river. The laws of nature have dictated that this shall be so, and all the power and money of the Union Pacific cannot prevent it much longer. The Columbia river on both sides is destined to have two large cities, and if a western New York is built on one side, a western Brooklyn must be built on the other.

The Home Traits of a Foreign Proverb.

The spanish proverb—mañana de espagnol—"tomorrow is dangerous, will brevity is the soul of wit," this means a great deal. sickness and other misfortunes in health and drinking are productive of one tremendous evil—the progenitor of many others—and these are among the foes to which time policy says for their direct application. The evil to which we allude is indigestion to the relief and cure of which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has contributed more than any medicine which science has given to the American people. This invigorating stomachic and corrective is the means not only of restoring a disordered or enfeebled condition of the digestive organs, but of renewing healthy action of the bowels and the liver. Besides this, it counteracts a tendency to rheumatism and a diuretic complaint.
