MONKEY WITH "RED MILL" GETS GOOD SALARY

BEST PLAY OF THE SEASON WILL BE HERE SATURDAY WHEN THE CURTAIN GOES UP ON THE MUSICAL COMEDY "THE RED MILL."

Jocko, the monkey who plays a very important and conspicuous role in "The Red Mill," is perhaps the only monkey in the world who is playing in a musical comedy, who actually gets a salary. Jocko's name is on the pay-roll. His money is put into an envelope and it is handed to him, just as though he were a man. He knows when the "ghost walks" as well as any other member of the company, and he takes his pay envelope eagerly, and it is a difficult matter for his keeper to get it away from him in order to put the money in the bank.

Of course, Jocko has a keeper. This keeper travels with him all the time, looks after his wants and keeps him in line. He is also paid a salary, but his money is separate from that of his charge. Jocko even has a bank book made out in his own name, and all the money he earns is placed to his credit, and is subject to his signature, per his keeper.

When the money is to be drawn from the bank, Jocko is taken to the window and his check is presented, the keeper transacting the business. The simian has a great love for money, and he is never quite so happy as when he has a few shining pieces of gold or silver in his possession. He has a little purse,

BERT. O. SWOR

which he is very fond of, and in this a number of bright pennies are always kept. This monkey will take the pennies out every time he gets an opportunity and finger them over and he seems to count them with all the eagerness and avidity of a miser.

Jocko was once just a common, organ-grinder monkey in New York. He used to hop around at the end of a chain and gather in the small coins of kind-hearted people for his master, an Italian organ-grinder. He was always a very quick-witted little fellow, and when his master was killed by being run over by an automobile, the poor little fellow was disconsolate, and it was feared he would die. His present owner saw the grief of the little animal, and purchased him from the widow and kept him as a pet.

During this time he trained the little animal, and when he heard that a monkey was needed for "The Red Mill," he took him over and put him through his paces.

"I will engage him," said the stage manager after seeing the monkey perform. "I will sign him up at once."

Jocko then went on the stage, where he has since been a great hit.

Canada Will Control Cables.

Ottawa, Canada, April 1.—The Canadian government today is preparing to put into effect a law which is tantamount to governmental control of the public business of cable companies operating from Dominion coasts.

The legislation was put through the Canadian commons last night in the shape of a measure by Postmaster General Lemiux, giving the railway commission control of rates and facilities of cable companies.

Reaching the Top.

In any calling of life, demands a vigorous body and a keen brain. Without health there is no success. But Electric Bitters is the greatest Health Builder the world has ever known. It compels perfect action of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, purifies and enriches the blood, tones and invigorates the whole system and enables you to stand the wear and tear of your daily work. "After months of suffering from Kidney Thouble," writes W. M. Sherman, of Cushing, Me., "three bottles of Electric Bitters made me feel like a new man." 50c at J. C. Perry's.

NICARAGUA IS A THORN IN UNCLE SAMUEL'S FLESH

New Orleans, La., April 1—The attempt of General Gordon, former commander of artillery for Provisional President Estrada of Nicaragua, to outfit an expedition for the aid of the provisional government will end in the state department taking a definite stand in the Nicaraguan case, it is believed here.

The federal authorities here were asked to stop Gordon's expedition. Gordon declared that the state department did not recognize the Madriz government in Nicaragua and that he was therefore not planning an expedition against a friendly power and was not violating the neuerality laws. The Madriz agents who brought the case before the federal authorities argued that the Madriz government in Nicaragua is the regular government and that all treaties and understandings between the United States and Nicaragua in effect before the Estrada revolution are still in effect, in spite of the action of Secretary Knox, who returned the passports of the Nicaraguan representatives at Washington at the time it was reported two Americans had been executed at the order of former President Zelaya.

The federal authorities here concluded the problem was too knotty for them and decided to send the whole matter to the state department for settlement. They declare that the state department will have to decide officially whether the Madriz government is the government of Nicaragua or whether Estrada is the president of the little republic.

The situation in Nicaragua has been a source of considerable annoyance to the federal authorities here ever since Knox wrote a note to the former repdesentative of the Nicaraguan republic, declaring that he would hold each faction in the republic responsible for its actions. Since then Zelaya fled from his country and Dr. Madriz was chosen by the Nicaraguan congress to succeed him. Estrada claimed that the eastern half of the republic was without representation in congress and that the election was illegal. His faction contends that the Madriz faction is not one of those referred to in the Knox note, and that, therefore, the Estrada government is now the only government recognized by the United States.

Both sides have made efforts before to get a ruling from the state department, but the secretary has so far never made any indication of the position of the United tates in the matter, and since the first withdrawal of gunboats from Greytown and Bluefields the matter has been left without official settlement.

Federal authorities here have had dealings with the representatives of both governments. Every ship that has sailed for Nicaraguan points has caused a dispute. The representatives of one faction have refused to sign manifests for each cargo and each ship has sailed under protest from the government either of Estrada or Madriz.

The authorities here are glad of the opportunity to get a definite ruling from Washington as to the standing of the governments.

FAULTS OF THE PRESS.

In their recent discussion of the faults of the daily papers the members of the Pacific Coast Woman's Press association instanced the publication of divorce and criminal news.

This, says the San Francisco Chronicle, is a subject long in controversy, and some years ago an effort was made at Topeka, Kansas, by the Rev. C. M. Sheldon, who was given charge for a week of a leading paper of that city, to demonstrate that a daily newspaper could omit all such information from its columns and still satisfy its readers. The result, even in hide-bound Kansas, was unfavorable.

Mr. Sheldon did his best, assisted by a capable staff, and the result was not a newspaper, but a literary curio. Topeka enjoyed the novelty for a few days, but the demand was insistent for the news; and the publishers in taking back control did not have reason to believe that a single one of Mr. Sheldon's innovations would pay to continue. People wanted to know when folks were divorced and when crime was committed, not all of them, by any means, because of prurient motives.

In such matters one has to credit some wholesome precautionary instincts among readers, as well as a settled conviction among those sociologically inclined, that the less publicity there is for such things the more divorces and the more crimes will occur.

Other criticisms of the daily press at the meeting were of the headlines which misled the reader as to the meaning of the text or are written to be only picturesque or dramatic.

We, says the Chronicle, on this score, concede that headlines sometimes fall short or offend taste, but in journals of quality the blame is usually mechanical. In the fixed space given headlines, so that they may preserve typographical unity, there is not room for full details and the right descriptive word sometimes overruns, leaving the writer to take the next best. And there is always hurry.

It is far easier for a critic, with unlimited words at call, to point out the deficiencies of headlines than it is for a writer who can only get a few words into a given space and must do it speedily, to cure them. He is usually fortunate if under such a handicap he can be exact.

In the attributes of honesty, which the ladies also considered, papers differ as men do, says the Chronicle, according to their lights, but the general run of them are more reliable than people who pass news of their own from mouth to mouth.—The Fourth Estate.

One Conductor Who Was Cured.

Mr. Wilford Adams is his name, and he writes about it.—"Some time ago I was confined to my bed with chronic rheumatism. I used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect, and the third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as conductor on the Lexington, Ky., Street Railway. It gave me more relief than any medicine I had ever used, and it will do all you claim in cases of rheumatism." Foley's Kidney Remedy cures rheumatism by eliminating the uric acid from the blood. J.
