Sunnysime Puss Clue Meers.—A petition signed by about 500 names asking that the City Council take steps to erect a new oridge across the Willamette River between Basi Mill street on the Bast Side and Clay street on the West Side, received the indorsement of the Sunnyside Push Club at its meeting last night. It is a bridge to take the place of the present Madison bridge on Hawthorne avenue and Madison street, but will have another location. Van Hoomissen, who has been working up this movement for a new location for the Madison bridge, addressed the Push Citib and said that the object of selecting a new location for the Madison bridge is to get above the car tracks of the O. W. P. and Southern Pacific lines. The Mayor's veto of the five-year lighting contract was unanimously indorsed by the Push Citib. A resolution was passed favoring the University of Oregon appropriation and declaring that the Logislature should appropriate enough money to support the State University in a way that would make it a creditable institution. J. N. Davis, a member, who received one of the prizes offered by the Commercial Club for articles on Oregon, by request read the articles.

BY ARTHUR A GREENE. NEW comedy that proves a we A NEW comedy that proves a "Brewster's Milwhich opened a brief engagemen at the Hellig last night. It is a dramatization of George Bear McCutcheon's widely-read story, and to the credit of those who arranged it, more interesting its stage form. This is probably chiefly due to the fact that the third fairly gasped. We have had chariot race and boat races and a dozen and one othe big spectacular effects which have carrie big spectacular effects which may carried recent plays upon the top wave of success. These big mechanical effects always "go," probably because, after all, down deep, we love melodrama, providing it is properly introduced into polite society. The yacht scene in the third act of "Brewster's Millions" can hold its own with any properly in the control of the control "Brewster's Millions" can hold its own with any preceding experiments in stage realism. When that yacht weighs anchor and the winds blow and the storm descends, every auditor begins to feel a bit uneasy about the distance to the rail. It's really a remarkable effect—enough in itself to make the attraction.

The rather trivial story of "Brewster's Millions" is that of a young man who, having inherited $1,000,000 from his grandfather, shortly afterwards is made the beneficiary by the will of an uncle who
