"The Forest Bell" at the Heilig.

"THE FOREST BELL," a dramatic opera in two acts, was given last night at the Heilig theater by the students of the Blanchet Institute, and was received with marked appreciation by the large audience. The scenes are picturesque and contain several dramatic moments. The comedy element is also well developed. The story is interesting and has some of the fascination of Sherwood Forest.

The first scene opens with a hunting party given by Prince Percival. While torturing the deer of the game, the Prince unjustly accuses old Forster, his former gamekeeper, of being a poacher. Alexis, his son, overhears the accusation and resents the insult. Whereupon the Prince strikes him. Karl Krag, a poacher, who has overheard the proceedings, tries to persuade Alexis to avenge the insult. Alexis is about to follow his advice when the ringing of the forest bell awakens him to a sense of the gravity of such a crime.

In the end Krag is identified as the guilty person, and the play ends satisfactorily. John T. Driscoll, as the regent of the province, and Aloysius J. Hyland, as Alexis, the gamekeeper's son, acted with intelligence and ease. Robert E. Driscoll also gave a pleasing portrayal of the role of Franz Strauh, a wanderer. The comedy work of George G. Kelly as Bluster, a police commissioner, was frequently applauded. No small element in the success of the entertainment were the songs and choruses. These were pleasingly sung by Aloysius J. Hyland, George C. Kelly and Robert E. Driscoll, assisted by the well-trained chorus. Preceding the opera was a short programme consisting of musical and literary numbers was rendered. At the close of the entertainment certificates were presented by Archbishop Christie to the following members of the second-year class: Carl F. Meyer, Robert E. Driscoll, Joseph W. Doyle.

Following is the programme that preceded the opera: Chorus, "Colleen Bawn"; Hefl Quartet of Brutus and Cassius (from Julius Caesar); Shakespeare Act IV, Scene III, Brutus; Jerome P. Hurley; Cassius P. M. Frank P. McKinley; Chorus, "In Vacation Time"; Von Tilzer Extract, "The American Sailor"; Edwin J. Kenedick; Chorus, "Golden Rod"; McKinley Violin solo; Selected Robert B. Driscoll; Concert reading, "Shandon Belle"; Mahony Commercial Class.

BOATS RESUME ON SNAKE

O. R. & N. Replaces Steamer Spokane to Handle Fruit Shipments.

LEWISTON, Idaho, June 19.—(Special.)—It was learned today that the O. R. & N. Company will, next week, provide a daily boat service between Riparian and Lewiston, by again putting the steamer Spokane in commission. This is taken to mean that the long-promised inauguration of train service over the new rail line has again been postponed. Since the Spokane has been in drydock, undergoing repairs, the steamer Lewiston has been trying to handle all the business on the river, giving Lewiston and points between here and Riparian only a tri-weekly service. With the rapid maturing of the fruit in the river orchards, there has been an urgent demand for a better service and complaint was made to the O. R. & N. people, both by the fruitgrowers along the river and by the Lewiston Commercial Club.

VEToes LONG FRANCHISE

Mayor of Minneapolis Says Short Ones Mean Good Service.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 19.—Mayor Hayes today vetoed an ordinance granting a 35-year franchise to the Minneapolis Central Electric Company. In his veto message he said that the only thing that would compel good service and reasonable rates from this company was a renewal of its franchise every ten or 15 years. He also recommended a small gross earnings tax sufficient to defray the expense incident to the examination of the company's plant whenever a readjustment of rates or purchase of the plant should be under consideration.

Crawford Shoes A DISTINCTIVE PRODUCT Originality is the language of genius; ordinary methods do not usually express it. Yet genius is sometimes a draft on the world which banks refuse to cash. Many inventors have died madmen and paupers although their inventions have been a source of fortune to thousands. You may "copy-right" a book or "patent" a device—although it requires capital to publish the one or exploit the other. But the law makes no pretence of guarantee of exclusive ownership in shoe-design. No matter at how great expense or by whom produced—pirate manufacturers may freely appropriate any design they choose. CRAWFORD STYLES MAY BE—FREQUENTLY ARE—APPROPRIATED BY OTHER MANUFACTURERS; ONLY THE NAME IS COPY-RIGHTED. OTHERS MAY PROCURE THE SAME MACHINERY AND PURSUE SUBSTANTIALLY THE SAME METHODS OF MAKING. CHOICE LEATHERS ARE SOLD IN OPEN MARKET WHERE ALL MAY BUY; THE CRAWFORD FACTORY IS THE LARGEST SINGLE CONSUMER, BUT ENJOYS NO MONOPOLY. OTHERS MAY USE THE SAME DESIGNS, CUT THE SAME MATERIALS AND MAKE AS GOOD SHOES. A CHOICE FEW DO. BUT NO OTHER CONCERN IN THE WORLD ATTEMPTS SUCH PRODUCTION AT CRAWFORD PRICES. $3.50 $4.00 $5.00 Therein Is the Distinction. Crawford shoes are not only remarkably strong in value, but are sold also in a clean, original way. The occasional impudence, gross exaggeration, little deceptions and indifferent service of the ordinary establishment ARE NOT TOLERATED IN THE CRAWFORD SHOE STORE. We serve you right; every possible advantage to our customers is liberally provided. You may safely accept our promises and depend upon our shoes; we fulfil the promises and stand squarely behind the shoes. We cordially invite you to visit our store and look over our assortment. Our salesmen will not act "smart" if you decide not to purchase.

WANTS PAY FOR HIS SALT

Norwegian Carpenter in Trouble With His Neighbors.

Chris Hanson, a Norwegian carpenter who lives at Seventeenth and Thurman streets, was arrested last night by Patrolman Ben Peterson because he had struck Mrs. Margaret Bacon, a neighbor, in the month with his fist and broken out two of her teeth. He was locked up in jail in default of $75, charged with assault and battery. Mrs. Bacon and her 20-year-old son appeared at the police station as witnesses against the man. From the evidence given it appears that Mrs. Bacon had repeatedly invited Hanson and his wife to her house to dine with the Bacon family, and that on some of these occasions Hanson brought with him salt or pepper or some other condiment to contribute to the meal. After having accepted the hospitality of the Bacon family for a long period, Hanson last night presented Mrs. Bacon with a bill for $6 for salt, pepper and other contributions which he had made to the general table. Mrs. Bacon refused to pay the bill and spoke in rather bitter sarcasm of a man who would present such a bill after having partaken of her hospitality for such a length of time. It was then that Hanson struck her. The blow was witnessed by her son, who called the policeman.
